Sign your name for Festival in the Forest

The long-planned, long-promised Festival in the Forest, for which Housing Commissioner Doris Lee Ray has been striving for years to get the Federal Government to pay for, is finally up.

We wholeheartedly support an initiative campaign urging passage of a bond issue to purchase land for the Festival in the Forest.

Initiative 379, which has received the initiative for which it was designed, will be on the Washington presidential primary.

Those who claim that the initiative is needed in order to have a new state law on the books in time for the election is a fallacy.

The initiative is needed to bring the people of Washington into the presidential primary.

The people of Washington should have a voice in choosing their president.

The fish were bitin'

The 6th fishing hole was a little crowded, but some 300 kids had a good ol' day, anyway.

The occasion was the Eighth Annual Green River Steelhead Trout Club Fishing Derby Saturday at Five Mile Lake. Young folks and bigger folks packed the crowded, picturesque lake, poles and lines making a spider web pattern in the sun.

Sliding along the crowded dock, wading through tackle boxes and overturned bait containers, dodging worm-laden hooks as they were cast into the water, the cries of "Watch out, fish on!" were frequent.

Jeff Smiley, 5 years old, reeled in a small trout and his face lit up. He was getting to be an old hand. "I caught five," he said proudly. And the day was yet young.

Becky Boone got her limit of eight early in the day. Her catch included a 14-incher, the longest of the day to that point.

Spencer Hawkins, 4 years old, perched calmly on the dock rail secure in the protective arm of his father. In his hands he clutched a pole that was not much longer than him. He hadn't had much luck so far, but he didn't seem to mind.

Members of the fishing club circulated through the crowd, offering tidbits of advice and plenty of encouragement. It was far from clear who was having more fun, the sponsors or the kids.

And patient parents, maybe remembering the old days, dozing at the edge of the pond, pole propped on a rock, blade of grass hanging limply from the teeth, were very much in the spirit.

Fishing. There's no recreation like it.

Everybody won a prize at the Derby, and everybody seemed to be happy, because the best prize was not the ribbons, not even the mess of fish to take home for the frying pan. It was the grins on the faces of the people on this good day at Five Mile Lake.
Woman tells jury of rape at Mall

Woman tells jury of rape at Mall

Wednesday, May 16, 1979

A petite redhead told of motor home while it was parked in a bedroom of her attacker's home.

The woman testified she met Chris Palzer, an 18-year-old woman, she testified she was raped in the bedroom of his motor home while it was parked.

She said he threatened her with a knife and that he had "practically looking at the right person if you just lose a lot," she said.

She said she left the mall with him and drove to the Steak Fac-cy where Palzer said he could get a job as a waiter.

Later, when they returned to the mall, the woman said she wanted to leave but Palzer reportedly exclined to have a drink and "sneezed" cocaine through a rolled dollar bill. "I was scared of him, so I took it," she said of the jury of six men and six women.

Palzer is accused of forcing her into the bedroom, undressing her and forcing her to submit to sexual acts. He then took pictures of her in the nude and crowded to avoid garments she was wearing.

The woman said she threatened to tell her boyfriend but Palzer returned, "you're never gonna see me again. You're gonna stay with me." She said he forced acts made her feel "icky."

The woman also testified that Palzer brought something into the cupboard. She thought he was getting a weapon.

When she finally managed to escape the motor home, the woman said she ran partially clothed through the parking lot, with Palzer in pursuit. Two Tacoma teenagers helped her then followed the motor home to get the license number.

During her time with Palzer, the Midway woman told the jury in Judge James Don's court, "I was gone to apply for a job. Palzer in the Mall where she had met him, the woman said she wanted to apply for a job.

Under direct examination from Deputy Prosecutor Ron Clark, the woman said she had "definitely not" agreed to the acts performed with Palzer.

Correction

The wrong headline appeared over the story on the Chris Palzer rape trial in Sunday's edition of the NEWS on page A. 4. The headline, "Man Jailed after two local children raped," was originally written for a story on the case of a 13-year-old woman.

Pulzer is charged with second degree rape of an 18-year-old woman March 6. We regret the error.

Contrasting decors highlight home tour

Visitors who take part in the South Star Guild's Home Tour scheduled from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 20, will be treated to a variety of interior decors as they tour the four homes that have been selected for the benefit event for the mentally retarded in the Federal Way area.

For instance, the home of James and Marquinn Short at 32520 30th Ave. S.W. is done entirely in antiques, with the exceptions of appliances and a few pieces of furniture in the family room. The exterior of the modern home of George Maitland at 32643 39th Place S.W. is cedar and features natural columns and a pool and waterfall at the entrance, along with extensive use of fine natural woods in the interior.

Oriental art and furnishings set the theme of the home of John and Jackie Patterson at 3955 S.W. 316th St. The beautiful collection has grown in more recent years, mainly through Patterson's 'Jackie's excellent taste in art of the Far East.'

The strictly modern home of Gail and J. Max Watson overlooking Commencement Bay and Brown's Point was featured in the magazine's "Home of the Year." Carol Moorhead will serve as hostess at St. Theresa's Catholic Church located high above Dash Point which will serve as the "tea house" on the tour. Metro feels the pinch
Gas squeeze forces longer bus waits
by Carolyn Logan
So you thought you'd beat the rush? Well, Metro is feeling the pinch of higher fuel costs, and riders may feel the extra time it takes -- by, stick with it, a longer ride.
"For now," said Metro spokesman Bob Sharar, "we're doing all we can to add extra runs and extra buses because there's a 5 percent cutback in the budget this year.
"Our fuel supplier advises us that the price for fuel will go up 15 percent,"" Sharar explained. Then, Friday's full-bulit fuel runs, he added.
Average fares for Metro, he said, have within a couple of months in a micro-diesel direct from three to a five-to-seven day supply, according to "gas" of diesel daily, according to "speed of the gas fluctuation" price limits from "same class," he added.
Instead, Sharar said, riders can expect less frequent service because, "Metro couldn't run every 15 minutes with this kind of fuel.
"We've been at one of our busiest times in March," he said.
"And we're taking steps to be able to adjust by diesel prices," he assured.
Metro pays about $400 cents a gallon for its fuel, he said, and Sharar, with a straw, promised that fare won't be increased to offset fuel prices.
Metro is also guarding against a major crisis by forming plans for collector vehicles and old cars. Establishing more lots is an easier way to see fuel, Sharar said, since it curbs the drain from long runs. Still, "the Port won't make us take away existing lots," he added.
Metro will also encourage car pooling and other commuter's ways to open up peak loads, Sharar, admitting that "we're going to try before, conceded, 'There's nothing magic about it; but a crisis prevention measures.'"

The Mt. Rainier Rams qualified 10 spikers for the West Central District track meet in the North Puget Sound League meet last weekend at Highland Stadium.

The Rams girls, who scored 31 points in the meet, good for fifth place, qualified five athletes. The boys finished up in ninth place with 39 points and qualified three athletes.

Kennedy, in a split second, garnered the depth of Kenneth Hazen's Individual second with 78 points. Kennedy, who tied for first place in the girls 1,600, also qualified five athletes.

For the boys, brilliance overcame surprise, garnered the depth of Jon Webster's first place in the event. He placed 5th and 6th for third place and set a Ram school record in the process. She will join teammate Pam Gossman in district.

O'Donnell scored a 1:59.1 give the Rams all season, Loneer track placed fourth in the district. Lisa Cleared claimed 94 for third. Cleared also qualified in the 800-yard hurdles, with a fourth place clocking of 1:11.8.

Crystal Hamilton will join the district contingent after she tossed the discus 131-4 and one-half for fourth place.

For the boys, weightman Dan Eer­hart led the way. Er­hart tossed the discus 155-7, a personal best and good enough for second place in the event. He will be an alternate to district.

Pavlich's 1:59.1 gave him a number-two second-place time of 19.4; the 220, 22.9, and 15-2. The Decatur 440 relay team ran a 4:43.9 clocking in the mile was a pleasant surprise, noted Gator track coach Matt Conkey.

The Decatur 440 relay team of Allen Baldwin, John Sullivan, C.L. Fagan and Scott Holden notched the fourth fastest seed in that event with a 3:44.6 checking.

The Gators had two surprising Ram athletes turn in disappointing efforts. For the girls, the chance of going to district. Dan Wilson, a 2:04-0 pole vaulter a year ago, could manage only 12 feet and finished sixth. He will be an alternate to district. Bob McCauley, a steady competitor in track, ran a good time in the open 440, but missed qualifying.

Tom Eilertson took fourth in the 440, 115-7, a personal best. Dan Coplin's four hits one, Dan Eer­hart, Scott Miller and Tom Love ran a good time in the open 440, but missed qualifying. Tom Kilcup, a contender in both the 100 and 200.

Cordes said all four members of the mile relay team ran personal bests.

The district athletes will compete at Highline Stadium beginning Friday. Field events are held Friday and Saturday, with running events at 7. The event will continue Saturday with the same starting times.

Preparations for a key election of office were started at the recent Washington Little League Coordinating Council Meeting.

A nominating committee was assembled to contact possible candidates for the upcoming season. Ways and Means, publicity, and lights coordinator, indices director, umpire coordinator and other topics of discussion were the recent vandalism at Blueway's field No. 2, where a large section of the fence was replaced, plus the possibility of families opposing the Stoneway games in the face of the current gas crunch.

A serious subject this year, as every year, is the protection of those children involved in the Little League program. It cannot be present at all times and practices, as arranged by those operating with one of the local medical establishments so that emergency care may be sought for those children involved in the games. These arrangements can be made with our local aid.

responsiveness key to community needs

by Ann Hagen

Seattle is the city where she's recently taken over the position of Roberta's Lodge, Multiservice Center's executive director, Maggie Ellis talked about her new role.

"Most of them confer around developing a good combination of professional, church and community," she said. "Some of them are local churches, others are national organizations such as meals in wheels, elderly homes, home health care, she said, "It's something that just can't be done alone.

She talked about the value of a community-based service as opposed to a hypercyclical. We can be more responsive because we have the flexibility and are more responsive to community needs. We're close to the people.

"One, a woman a week with a quick smile and strawberry hands was take over the executive position that was recently located by Stephanie Eldrnghoff for 12 years, four VISTA employees, Mike Wilson, Rich Long, Donna Reilly, Trudy Bowers, all of which support programs for emergency, low-income and handicapped seniors.

With an background in teaching at a master's from Western State University in adult and continuing education, she said she is prepared to handle the needs of the city, many of which are not being met.

"Communication is important," said Ellis. "We really have to be almost a cliche but this in job you need to communicate with all of people, clients, a variety of media, staff plus the public who insure feeding," she said.

"By saying I think they should prepare for the peak, Ellis said. "I'm happy to do the job as a team but it's not a job for all. We're happy to do it for all.

What if you have a fire tonight?

"Find a service station," said Ellis. "We're here for that.

"We're all prepared to do that," she said. "But if the problem is just a cliche but this is job you need to communicate with all of people, clients, a variety of media, staff plus the public who insure feeding," she said.

"By saying I think they should prepare for the peak, Ellis said. "I'm happy to do the job as a team but it's not a job for all. We're happy to do it for all.

Federal Way's Fire Department had to do last week what it tried to secure gas for its newly-installed pumps. It took a full week to cut through the red tape before the pumps were delivered.

"Well, it's just not the public affairs," said Ellis. "I guess it means we're going to the ground, and where we will be in five months, it's just not the public affairs."

"What if you have a fire tonight?" said Ellis. "Find a service station," she said. "We're here for that.

responsiveness key to community needs

by Ann Hagen

Seattle is the city where she's recently taken over the position of Roberta's Lodge, Multiservice Center's executive director, Maggie Ellis talked about her new role.

"Most of them confer around developing a good combination of professional, church and community," she said. "Some of them are local churches, others are national organizations such as meals in wheels, elderly homes, home health care, she said, "It's something that just can't be done alone.

She talked about the value of a community-based service as opposed to a hypercyclical. We can be more responsive because we have the flexibility and are more responsive to community needs. We're close to the people.

"One, a woman a week with a quick smile and strawberry hands was take over the executive position that was recently located by Stephanie Eldrnghoff for 12 years, four VISTA employees, Mike Wilson, Rich Long, Donna Reilly, Trudy Bowers, all of which support programs for emergency, low-income and handicapped seniors.

With an background in teaching at a master's from Western State University in adult and continuing education, she said she is prepared to handle the needs of the city, many of which are not being met.

"Communication is important," said Ellis. "We really have to be almost a cliche but this in job you need to communicate with all of people, clients, a variety of media, staff plus the public who insure feeding," she said.

Westsiders sue Port over Weyerhaeuser lease

A lawyer representing the Westsiders-Hilltop Service Committee announced Monday he will file a suit against the Port of Seattle regarding Port Commission approval of a lease for a Weyerhaeuser corporate aviation facility.

Lawyer Roger Leeds said he will file "the strongest possible" suit against the Port, and will name Weyerhaeuser as a defendant.

"We have been consulted and taken to be surprised by the way the lease (agenda item) popped up against the Port, and will name Airport and Weyerhaeuser as defendants," Leeds said.

Leeds said the Port had neither sought nor been granted Weyerhaeuser corporate approval of a lease for a facility at the Boeing Field, which the Port is scheduled to hear Monday.

Leeds added: "There has never been a lease approval in the overall (Sea-Tac) Airport Plan," he asserted, noting the plan was last revised in 1977. Nor has there been a federal impact statement, he said, noting that you can't ask for a federal EIS in a non-covered court.

When the committee files in King County Superior Court, there will be ample financial backing to wage legal action, according to a committee spokesperson.

Leeds said he also claimed the Port ignored the "only Community Plan in Weyerhaeuser matter." Observing that the county opposed general aviation expansion north of South 216th Street, Leeds asked, "Are there any rules for the Port (to follow)?"

The "RULES ISSUE" also is an issue in the Westsiders-Hilltop Service Committee's legal opposition to Boeing and King County.

The committee asks King County Superior Court to nullify previous government-approved land-use changes that have enabled the Boeing general aviation expansion. Trial date has been set for Oct. 8.

In one early skirmish, parties are filing motions alleged to render the committee's suit moot.

On March 7, Boeing raised two quibbles, including requests for names of all Westsiders-Hilltop Service Committee members and legal descriptions of properties involved in the suit.

The Boeing lawyer, Richard McCann, said he received Leeds' answers last Friday's date to hear a Boeing motion to compel interrogatories. Receipt rendered the suit, he said.

McCann anticipates more interrogatories from each side before the October court date.

The suit's "Rule" issue is based on the need to set up proper procedures for quite some time in order to complete the campus and eliminate supervisory problems with students.

The site would allow the students supervised access to a complete line of bedroom furniture and accessories, according to a source in the city's development bureau.

King County officials.

The Washington State Liquor Control Board announced the issuance of a Modern of Morris, Ltd., for Class E.F. to sell beer and wine for home consumption at 30th and Washington.

According to district officials, it was their belief that the license was approved at the time.

"They have been advised to file another application for the proper for quite some time in order to complete the campus and eliminate supervisory problems with students."

FEATHERS
When you have a dream that is meaningful, you must be determined enough to follow it. There is no substitute for work. One day, you will look back and know that it all worked out.

The News Wednesday, May 16, 1979
Feast your eyes on this...

Dressed in a stiff white uniform and draped with gold medals, the chef, wearing the familiar tall hat, leans over his stove and prepares a delectable Chicken Cordon Bleu. Carefully he instructs his students on the special techniques needed for a perfect creation.

The students, however, aren't ordinary; they are shoppers at SeaTac Mall where a unique culinary arts show took place last weekend. The nightmare and advanced cooks saw demonstrations and tasted samples created by professional experts.

Several of the chefs were students from Seattle Central Community College's Culinary Arts Program, and director David Madayag, they created everything from vegetable roses to stuffed chicken Hawaiian.

The recent winners of 73 gold medals and eight trophies in a Washington state culinary arts competition, the students displayed an intricate flamingo, Indian medallion and cartoon pictures made from various food ingredients.

Madayag observes more people are becoming interested in the food services and especially the culinary arts.

The creations on view were outgrowths of the program's six-quarter food program.

For another look at the state of the food's art, Kelly Gunderson of the Cafe Patisserie displayed desserts looking so delicious they just had to be sampled. The lavish bread baskets, dainty petits fours required no persuasion, passers-by gladly stopped and tasted the wares.

Further proving decorations can look as good as they taste, the students from the Renton Vocational Technical Institute designed colorful watermelon displays for children's parties, said instructor Ms. VanDecar.

During the show his students created edible decorations out of apples, oranges and grapefruit.

No culinary job would be completed without handy kitchen tools, and at the Panhandler exhibit, every gadget from tomato slicer to an electric food processor was demonstrated.

"Many cooks are getting back to the UtlUe gadgets," noted Gene Penix, who with his wife Lynn, manage the cook ware store.

"Our grandmothers used all these small tools, but later generations decided not to use them. However, they are becoming popular again."

From the wild west and the far north, "Sourdough" Jack Mabee introduced his true old-fashioned sourdough cookery to shoppers during the cooking show. Mabee has traveled throughout the west and Alaska collecting sourdough recipes and then compiled them into a cookbook. These are the hungry-man favorites that fed the gold-miner, trapper, cowboy, as well as grandmother.

Other displays featured Poverty Bay Wine Co. demonstrating cheese and wine pairings, Johnny's Seafood preparing fish, and the Specialty Spice Shop brewing teas.

Rainy day picnic

People who like picnics are a dedicated breed and turmoil storms do not discourage them. When the weather is monitored on a weekend picnic, a cold, rainproof door may open into your home-style flour. A new coating mix for chicken guarantees traditional fried chicken taste, even on the messiest of days.

Drippings

1 packet of cooing onto a sheet of wax paper or into a shallow bowl. Spread oil in a 15 x 10 x 1 inch jelly-roll pan. (A flat-bottom pan with sides not more than 1/4 inch deep will do best results.) In a large bowl, beat with fork, add water and oil and blend. Add all of the chicken and toss gently to moisten each piece on all sides. Starting with larger pieces, place chicken in coating, one piece at a time. Pile coating on chicken, then press firmly on all sides until the piece is thickly and evenly coated.

Fry in a 350°F oven, 25 minutes, then turn and fry 20 minutes longer, until chicken is tender. Remove from pan immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Molded salad makes the meal

There's nothing new about the onion. The fact is that onions have been flavoring foods for at least 6000 years. They have been creamed and served in onion soup. There is no soup more delicious than a creamy onion soup made with meat stock and milk. The soup is thickened with a creamy, rich, smooth roux. The onion soup served with a bowl of croutons, a salad, and a rich, buttery roll. Try cream of onion soup as the gravy for a dinner party. Danish Onion Soup is a favorite for sauteed mushrooms, ham, and eggs. Try cream of onion soup in place of meat stock and milk for a rich, creamy, delicious dish. Don't let the simplicity fool you. Danish Onion Soup does wonders for a sauteed pork fillet, beef, or chicken fillet.

The pudding is ready in short order. Serve plain, or top with whipped cream and pecan halves, and bake for about five minutes, or until bubbly. Mmm... spun pudding is transformed into a dessert delight. Today's convenience products provide the best of two worlds — economy and easy preparation. Butterscotch Tapioca Pudding 1 package (3.4 oz.) 1 egg yolk, slightly beaten 1 lb. brown sugar 1 lb. milk Combine pudding mix and two tablespoons brown sugar in saucepan. Stir in milk and egg yolk, blending until mixture well. Add butter. Cook will form stiff peaks. Drop by tablespoon onto prepared baking sheet. Bake at 250 degrees F. for about minutes, or until browned. Serve warm. Makes five servings. Today's convenience products provide the best of two worlds — economy and easy preparation.
