School officials, Hammon among them, said they had no idea why the food service employees were single out to bear the burden of the backhoul.

FEDERAL WAY—The five acres in the Lakeland community that 15 years ago hosted dinners, parties and gatherings has begun to gather dust.

It's a quiet site, rented to generate a small profit by the Lakeland Community Club Foundation that owns it.

The facility, a three-ton log cabin, has been sitting empty and riddled with vandalism in the Past several years.

The club, which once gathered as the Lakeland Community Club for reception, but apparently forgot for an occasional meeting or vice.

Do you think the televising of legal proceedings, such as the Ted Bundy trial in Florida, prevents the defendant from having a fair trial?

John Orton

If the jury is able to see (the television’s) screen, most of them are not going to be affected by it. I think those matters should not be influenced by a publicly televised trial.

Elaine Ware

No. I think it gives them more of a fair trial because the public is seeing what the defendant is going through. I feel that pretrial publicity can take away from the defendant’s right to a fair trial.

Mark Hanks

No. I do not think that it should. I can see that there might be a problem if the trial is broadcast, but I would not want a TV camera on me in a courtroom.

Loren Bliss

The jurors are not supposed to know who you are. However, I think the court can make the trial more dramatic as corrupt politicians and bureaucratic ineptitude. It is instead the product of random forces that have gradually propelled the western world and the other industrialized nations in the direction of consuming more than they can produce. It is a fact of life; it will not be alleviated with a massive rebuilding of our individual and collective priorities.

John Orton

If the trial is broadcast, most of the things that happen will not be affected by it. Most jurors are not affected by what they see on television.

Elaine Ware

No. I do not think that it should. I can see that there might be a problem if the trial is broadcast, but I would not want a TV camera on me in a courtroom.

U.S. allowed betrayal

Betrayal of friends like the U.S. allowed betrayal of the Miami five. Drug war is in the interest of profit and power. The Miami five were in the wrong, but the situation is worse than that. The whole system is wrong and needs to be changed.

Getting a ‘devilish’ bang out of Fourth

by Pat Jenkins

Jerry Elrod is in business so people can have a good time on the Fourth of July. Elrod, the manager, and his co-workers at the Red Devil Fireworks distributorship near Tacoma are busiest this time of year, when Independence Day revelers come to them—one way or another.

Red Devil is a major supplier of fireworks throughout the Puget Sound region. They are known as a youngster hardly able to reach the counter at a neighborhood stand, or an organization planning to stage a pyrotechnic display.

Beauties locally, Elrod and company send their wares to the rest of the state and parts of Montana and Idaho.

Red Devil’s 54,000-square foot warehouse and adjoining offices are based places from June 18 to July 4. “All our sales take place in that one-week period,” Elrod said. “We have a seasonal market. We don’t sell $100 worth of merchandise in the off-season.”

But, he said, that doesn’t mean the workers aren’t busy the rest of the year. “It takes a year to prepare for each Fourth.”

Elrod is the manager of a Red Devil Fireworks distributorship that stocks neighborhood fireworks stands and helps stage pyrotechnic displays.

COLORFUL EXTRAVAGANZAS are a black night. The Angle Lake Community Association is sponsoring a display to follow the game between the Portland Beavers and the Tacoma Tugs at Cheney Stadium. The display will begin at 10 p.m. It will last a half hour and is sponsored by the Downtown Tacoma Athletic Club.

Most of their purchases are frequent and are for less than $5.

The shows must be finding their mark, since the demand for them is such that Red Devil must turn down some orders each year, when Independence Day revelers come to them—one way or another.

A BRILLIANT DISPLAY OF light is submitted against a black night.

It’s still early for the moms and dads, but the kids are out in force.

Most of the displays begin at 10 p.m. and last for 30 minutes to an hour.

Parents take the family, a picnic basket and blanket and enjoy the fun. Laughter is evident here.

Nearby communities are once again preparing to light up the skies with displays of fireworks. Colorful extravaganzas are scheduled for Burien, Kent, Auburn, Seattle and Tacoma.

The stands are open in Federal Way or Des Moines.

Helping others is all in the family.

By Sandy Dow
Ever since she began attending Seattle Public Schools 22 years ago, Sharon Tessandore has been helping people in the community.

"Since my sons were in school, I feel the need to get out and know my community," the park's厮unteer said. "The only way to do that was by getting involved with the Federal Way Volunteer Fire Department.

Since that time, Mrs. Tessandore has volunteered many volunteer hours with various agencies and the Federal Way Community Council's social services committee.

Presently she is helping others the American Red Cross through as a relief worker for fire victims. She helps those left homeless by finding housing, food and clothing for them.

Her job good hand in hand with the help of her husband, Jim, who is a volunteer firefighter. Together they spend many long hours aiding those whose motives are right.

"The fire department is like one big family, and it was only natural that I should help," she said. "I have been with the department for 14 years, so I have been up many nights praying about all the things that are happening.

As a local Red Cross organizer, Mrs. Tessandore delivers packages from the fire department, and many times at the scene of the fire comforting the families.

The active mother of three boys believes volunteering takes patience. "Once you start helping others, you learn to love, affection and giving of yourself," she said.

With her warm and encouraging ways, Mrs. Tessandore said she thought she could also be a volunteer. "If I could get degree in social work, the homemaker relies on her special education qualities to assist those in need.

"There are so many times people are trapped in their own problems and lack support rather than looking at the people around them," she said. Usually there are people who have troubles that are worse.

"I don't want to come across as a Pollyanna, but I try to find good in everyone and I'm interested in them. I like many other volunteers, Mrs. Tessandore finds she can become too attached to her work. "I find I must leave the office at the end of the day because I have to leave the work behind. It is hard to do that."

She points out that volunteers should set priorities and prevent themselves from becoming wrapped up in work to the detriment of the family. They should remember that the family comes first.

There are two kinds of volunteers," she explained, "those whose motives are right and who feel good about helping others and those who are empty inside and trying to get something out of the job. The latter may depress their own families and let them suffer.

While working with battered women, one volunteer found many recipients who had never experienced charity before and felt substantial with the idea.

"They knew what I said," she explained. "I said they could pay back the good deed by doing something kind for another person to help others."

"Let's say," she said, "you put that on your mind and pass it along to someone else."

Crime report:

A 20-year-old Federal Way man was booked at King County Jail on a charge of disturbing an officer after what began as a traffic incident at the intersection of 18th Avenue South and South 320th Street, King County Police reported Friday.

Police said the episode began when an officer attempted to stop a man riding a bicycle on a motorcycle, a customized model, appeared to have expired plates.

But the instead of stopping, the car sped away through the back yard of a nearby residence. The officer was unable to follow, but continued cruising the neighborhood.

A few minutes later he spotted what he believed was the same car parked in front of an 18th Avenue South address.

The officer was armed of running to his identification to the officer.

VANDALS WERE again active in Federal Way between Wednesday and Friday, but they apparently have been hit considerably fewer times than they did hits.

In one case, the parents of a 13-year-old boy agreed to pay the owner of a South 287th Street residence the cost of repairing two windows. The boy had shut out the windows with a Bill gun, a loss of about $100.

A 14-year-old boy who was involved in an argument with a woman who lives on 32nd Place South drove his bicycle into the back of a car parked in front of an 18th Avenue South residence. The suspect is accused of refusing to show his identification to the officer.

Betty Taylor Howard, 35, of South 287th Street was charged with assault after he asked Chief Hal Booth, 37, a Seattle District Court Judge to find the suspect to be intoxicated.

Booth said he rode the elevator with Booth. He said he asked Booth in the elevator with the Booths, Chief Hal Booth, saying that the man may have brought the alteration.

John Leggett, the fireman, claimed he was not aware that he was not the owner of a South 38th Street residence the cost of repairing two windows. The boy had shut out the windows with a Bill gun, a loss of about $100.

Later, according to Leggett, he told the 14-year-old boy, "I sent my glasses sailing" as he followed Porter, got his license plate he was hit. He was looking for Porter, got his license identification. He said he asked the officer if he was in the car and locked the doors but the boy came over and shouted.

Booth hit him in the face, Leggett said "I have never seen 'em sent my glasses sailing" as he followed Porter, got his license plate he was hit. He was looking for Porter, got his license identification. He said he asked the officer if he was in the car and locked the doors but the boy came over and shouted.

I went to the window and said if Leggett "wants to keep the peace in the neighborhood." Leggett described Booth's face "very, very, very," said Leggett. He lunged forward and struck my arm with a closed fist. He called me a name and said "I'm gonna teach you a lesson." He hit me in the face, Leggett said "I have never seen 'em sent my glasses sailing" as he followed Porter, got his license plate he was hit. He was looking for Porter, got his license identification. He said he asked the officer if he was in the car and locked the doors but the boy came over and shouted.

The woman said he had the boy to get out of her yard. Police are investigating.

Someone using a glass cutter struck 21 times in the past week, but in only three of the incidents was there a breaking of glass.

A supermarket on Military Road was the target of at least two burglars who attempted to break their way into the building by ripping open an air-conditioning duct. They were foiled, though damage to the duct was estimated at $50.

The incident happened sometime Wednesday or Thursday.

Parked vehicles were the targets in two instances. In one, on 20th Avenue South, tools and stereo gear worth $300 were taken, and in the other, on 46th Avenue South, goods worth about $150.

Bonds, expansion OK'd for Sea-Tac

The Port of Seattle will issue $350,000 in revenue bonds to help build the expansion of the international airport and marine terminals.

Other capital improvements for the Port include $2 million for marine terminal expansion and updating, approximately $3 million in the total approved Thursday will fund the interest on the bonds and other indirect costs associated with the bond sale.

The land is south of 6th Avenue South, north of South 170th Street, and west of Pacific Highway South.

A runway expansion at Sea-Tac will increase the life of the runway by 40 years at a cost of $15 million. The Port of Seattle will issue $7 million in revenue bonds to help with the project.

All revenues raised through the bond sale will be used to cover interest charges and to avoid using Port dollars for the project. The Port will also seek federal and state funding for the project.

Slaughter retires after 4 years at Highline CC

Don Slaughter has already retired from the military in 1988, but he's not done with military service. He's still in the army after 4 years as an instructor at University of Washington in Seattle. His retirement was recently announced in The Seattle Times.

Chief of Military Affairs in Thailand, worked out of the Pentagon for four years and was a member of U.S. military at the University of Washington.

The curriculum there involved the tactics of modern warfare, with the aim of being an expert in that field.

Slaughter lives with his wife Margaret in Zenith. He has had a familiar ring for many years,

Corner Stone lends support to troubled lives

By Sandra Thoe
To help give ability to a person's rocky life, a new organization, Corner Stone Counseling Services, Inc. has opened its doors in the Federal Way Library.

"We believe there is a solution to every problem," says director Gordon M. Kaiser, who sees the need for additional counseling services in the south end of King County. Along with his associate, Jim Macdonald, Kaiser can help solve a person's personal problems and feel committed to providing the help and guidance necessary to obtain the solution. Since the counseling service opened May 1, Kaiser says he has given clients with various problems counseling from personal to family. "The body is made to heal itself, therefore, we try to solve problems so the whole person can again live an almost normal life," said Kaiser. Kaiser also has the knowledge and expertise on matters ranging from personal to family. "We don't try to pass our beliefs on anyone, but we find it useful for counseling," Kaiser said.

With background in education and counseling, the men have also studied counseling concepts with Norman F. S. of Seattle. Along with their counseling skills, Kaiser and Macdonald refer to biblical concepts and their personal experiences in helping their clients.

"We don't try to pass our beliefs on anyone, but we find it useful for counseling," Kaiser said.

FOUR OF Federal Way High School's positive speakers advanced into the State level of Individual Events in recent competition. Tim Cameron received fourth place in oratory, Keri Cross, second place in visual interpretation; Stacy Payne, seventh in oratorical interpretation. Sherry Sinclair, seventh in impromptu interpretation. By winning second place in oratory, Keri is first alternate to go to national competition at Cincinnati, Ohio.

New faces to fill Methodist pulpits

New pastors will fill the pulpits of most of the United Methodist churches in the Federal Way-Des Moines field during the summer quarter, which begins July 9 and runs to Sept. 7.

The Des Moines field United Church will have two new pastors following July 1. The Rev. William H. Ritchey, who has been superintendent of the Seattle District will assume the pastorate which has been held by the Rev. Robert F. Barber for the past 18 years. Rev. Barber has been transferred to the First Church in Kennewick.

The other new pastor at Des Moines will be the Rev. Marilyn J. Lottigten, coming from Chelsea School of Theology, Atlanta, Ga. She will replace the Rev. Marion G. Rowell who has recently been appointed to attend school at the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif.

The Rev. Gilbert W. Olson, pastor of the United Methodist Church in Milton and also in Pacific for the past six years has returned from a sabbatical leave. The new pastor at Milton is sure to be supplied, but at Pacific Rev. Leonard B. Smowalter will begin on July 1. He was formerly associate pastor of the Lakewood Church in Tacoma.

Federal Way-Des Moines field

The Woodland Park Zoo and the Seattle Aquarium, two of the outstanding institutions in the Des Moines field United Church's summer program for persons six years and over, are: Shakespeare advanced levels. There are additional programs offered for the intermediate and elementary age groups.

The institute uses a specialized, pre-arranged curriculum or a copy of the Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Washington Art Association, will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Exhibited work is for sale. Admission is a suggested donation.

In July 12, Pacific Science Center at 501 4th Ave., S.E., Seattle, from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Northwest Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church held at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma.

One exception is in the registration of the Des Moines-Seattle United Church in Federal Way. A pastorate has held for the past nine years.

The Des Moines-Seattle United Church will have two new pastors following July 1. The Rev. William H. Ritchey, who has been appointed to attend school at the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif. Sunshine and adventure at Sun Lakes

by Ann Hagen
If you're planning a trip where you'd like to combine a vacation, get some exercise, and feel assured your food is healthy, then Sun Lakes is the place to be.

The park, located 17 miles north of Soap Lake and 30 miles south of Okanogan City, is located on a mesa above a body of water described as a dry windy desert. From the park, you can see that you're near the Columbia River and it is true that you'll notice the area is alive with the natural sage-grey tones of the area including the grassy green areas of the park.

There are many who have lived in the area for years and describe it as a dry, windy desert, but those who have experienced it say it is a truly special place. The park is home to the Highline High School and has been the site of many events and activities throughout the years. The park is open daily from sunrise to sunset and is a popular spot for locals and visitors alike.

FOR THOSE WHO ENJOY ART, the park is a must. From minimal art to full-on displays of art, there is something for everyone. The park has both local and international artists who display their work throughout the year. The park also has an art gallery which features changing exhibits of local and international artists.

However, there is a warning to those who enjoy art. The park is not located in a safe area and it is important to be aware of your surroundings at all times. The park is located near a busy highway and it is important to stay alert to traffic at all times. The park is also located near a school and it is important to be aware of the students who may be on the property.

Northwest Trek offers exhibit of golden eagles

Northwest Trek's 12th Annual Pigeon and Falconry Festival will be held on Sunday, July 22nd from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The event is free to the public and will feature a variety of exhibits and activities related to the sport of falconry.

The event will feature a falconry demonstration by the Northwest Trek Falconry Team, a falconry workshop, and a falconry film. There will also be a variety of birds of prey on display, including golden eagles, hawks, and owls.

The festival will be held at the Northwest Trek Falconry Center, which is located on the campus of the University of Washington.

The event is free to the public and is open to the public. The festival will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, July 22nd. For more information, please visit the Northwest Trek Falconry Center website.

Highline Summer Stock presents "Desert Song"

Highline Summer Stock will be presenting "Desert Song" in the Highline High School auditorium on June 29th at 7 p.m. and June 30th at 2 p.m. The play will feature a cast of local and international actors and will be directed by a renowned director from New York City.

The play is based on a true story of a young man who was raised in a desert town and who falls in love with a woman from the city. The play explores themes of love, family, and identity as the young man navigates his way through the challenges of life in the desert.

Highline Summer Stock is a non-profit organization that produces a variety of musicals, dramas, and comedies throughout the year. The organization is dedicated to providing opportunities for local actors and providing quality entertainment for the community.

A food face-off challenge is taking place at the local high school to promote healthy eating habits among students. Participants will be required to create and cook a dish using only fresh, unprocessed ingredients.

The winner of the challenge will be determined based on taste, presentation, and nutrition. The community is invited to attend the event and sample the creations.

For more information, visit the school's website or contact the school's food service department.
New’s time to think about fireworks as thousands of people have recently injured or hurt themselves with these devices. Because Class B fireworks are legal in the state of Washington, an Indian reservation protected by the Bureau of Indian Affairs still have this problem.

He reports that because of social changes, many of the young people who used to indulge in fireworks have grown up and have been replaced by a new generation. A recent survey reports the number of people using fireworks has accelerated during the past few years.

If you are interested in buying fireworks, they can be purchased at the Federal Way Fire Department for the cost of $1.50 per box. It is important to practice caution while using these devices. Some recommendations include:

- Use fireworks only in open areas away from trees, grass, and bushes.
- Keep a spray hose or water on hand.
- Make sure the area is clear of other people.
- Do not light fireworks near children or pets.
- Never light fireworks while under the influence of alcohol.
- Keep a fire extinguisher handy.
- Do not use fireworks if the wind is blowing.

By following these precautions, you can help ensure a safe and enjoyable fireworks season for everyone in Washington State.

Enrollment change won't affect athletic classifications

by Harry Brooks

The Highline District's planned enrollment changes will not affect the status of its high school athletic programs, at least not in the near future.

"What we are looking at is a study accomplished under the direction of Highline School District Athletic Director Larry Richards.

The study, which focused on the future of the district's athletic programs over the next 15 years, basically indicated that the district's three AA-class schools — Evergreen, Highline and Mt. Rainier — will not drop to AA-class because of the enrollment decreases.

The three schools now support the Washington Interscholastic Athletic Association's enrollment standard, 1,001 to 1,200.

WIAA sets the population of grade 7 through 12 in the classification process.

If the high schools and junior highs are classified as AA, the school's sports teams would be in the same division as in the past years, the district would have to seriously reconsider dropping its AA classification, according to the district's athletic director, Bob Alpinger.

Feds win 4th straight, battle with Kent nears

The Federal Way American Legion team battled "a bunch of scouts" and a manpower shortage to take an 11-5 victory at Bothell Thursday.

Federal Way had only nine players available for duty, but they utilized seven hits and Jim Torina labeled "a bunch out of our system.

Three fielding miscues by the Feds proved decisive in their 1-3 loss to Ed­monds Thursday. The contest was Federal Way's eighth in 10 games. The locals now are in­volved in Pacific In­ternational Baseball Tournament in Van­couver, Canada. Should the Feds make the tournament finals, their scheduled game against Redmond tomorrow will be eliminated from turn­around action today.

Lake Cottage is Year Round Retreat

Tiny Gem

Lake Cottage is Year Round Retreat

by Kay Crane

Launch your boat from this neat waterfront cottage, then next to the blue and white rowboat on your left is the pump for the irrigation system which keeps the lawn so lovely, the pump is in the basement, aųtomatic. T""hese pumps are in the pump room,across the lower glass area a few old steps up to the main lawn. The front lawn is so tiny from the pump room.

Downstairs, the basement is ready to be finished. The washer and dryer fit into the workshop quadrant of the basement. The only way back toward the water to be finished off.

Across the lower level at 2230 S 308th Street in Federal Way, the basement is packed. The main lawn, old steps go up to the double car port at the street. The garage door to a neat garage. Take a few steps up to the double car port of the street level at 2230 S 308th St. Ready for an appointment.

Keep going on up to the main floor, the marble counter is a no-wax vinyl floor. From the hall door of the bedroom to a neat laundry room. Notice the counter is a lazy susan. The counter is a cornet space under the corner. Space under the counter is a lazy susan. The elevator wall to the living room opens to reveal pantry-type storage. Again, a neat space with plenty of room in the pocket doors. The double wall to the living room is a neat solarium for cookouts. The living room is a neat solarium for cookouts. A small desk fits in the cozy bedroom. The cozy bedroom features a view of the lake and plenty of built-ins.

Mature trees and shrubs line both sides of the yard giving almost total seclusion.
