Reaction positive to president’s speech

Mel Carlson

The speech was very vivid and had something that would have been very interesting to me. I think that the American people will get behind the president and conserve energy.

Jim Critcher

It made a lot of sense. At least it was politics, something that we normally don’t see. It is quite encouraging to see a man like this, and I am a hard-nosed Republican.

Barbara Burn

I personally do not think it was new enough even now before. I think it is that more than has been done in the last month, but it was as strong as I had hoped it would be.

Larry Smith

I liked the energy program, but I agreed with the newspapers that it was too much of a political speech. I don’t have ready solutions to these problems, and it’s not anything I would have supported.

Under the Capitol Dome

by Robert C. Cummings

Despite restrictions imposed by the House Rules Committee, one committee wants to hold full meetings clear through December.

The Rules Committee has voted to hold no more than three roll call votes on amendments, to be scheduled in August, October or December.

Individual committees are to be restricted to just two additional meetings during the same three months. The schedule is fixed and cannot be altered.

The House Energy and Utilities Committee is seeking permission to hold 11 meetings, twice this month, and additional meetings until the end of the month.

In the meantime, it has held one in Spokane, and proposes others in Olympia, Richland, SeaTac, Port Angeles and Vancouver.

In support of its request, it has submitted a five-page, single-spaced typewritten proposal arguing fifteen separate items.

The committee presumably will be a legislative session near year, which could be contingent upon approval of the annual session amendment which will be on this November’s general election ballot.

But regardless, it wants to focus committee activities during the interim among the goals of energy need, and prepare the necessary legislation for submission to the next session, whenever.

Jacque Magnier

It’s excellent if we can make it work — if the people and Congress get behind him. I thought it was great that he suggested a national recycling tape. That would be a real breakthrough.

Goals and Objectives

It is estimated that 60 percent of the estate passes to members of this immediate family. A Tax Break for Survivors and Death Distributions of $60,000 to $60,000.

Action is Speedy

As an example, an average community existing children consisting of government, with no money, would pay no inheritance taxes unless the value of the estate exceeded $100,000.

Bob Menohan

I think he is starting to back away from his advisors and if getting down to what people want to do. I can do more agreement with the way he has been doing things in the last week or so.

Doris Shea

It was well done. It makes sense and will work if they carry through with it. I hope that the program, especially the mass transportation part, is enacted.

King County Fair
Winding up 116th year

STOMACHAWARE! Stomachs were obviously a joy to these young fairgoers. Ron Wagner (left) and Scott Wedrich went to the fair on Wednesday.

The King County Fair at Enumclaw ends its 116th year today, the last day for fairgoers to take advantage of the fun. And it is square dance day on this fair Sunday. All square dancers in costume will be admitted free.

The fair, according to Maynard Ackerson, president of the King County Fair board, will be saluting the designation of square dancing by the Washington Legislature as the official state dance. Fairgoers will be able to watch, learn the basic steps and join in the fun with some of the top square dancers in the Northwest.

Gene Alex of Renton will call for about 50 dancers, beginning at 4 p.m. Among the square dancers who rescheduled to attend the festival are the Kent clubs, Dyn-A-Mite Kickers, Twirl-N-Teens and Kent Country Kickers.

The do-si-do events during the fair have been coordinated by the Central Puget Sound Square Dance Council of the Square and Folk Dance Federation of Washington.

Seattle radio station KMPS-AM is a co-sponsor of the square dancing activities. Fair officials said that there are more than 4,000 square dancers in King County and that interest in the activity is growing rapidly with many new clubs for all ages being formed.

In addition to the dancing and regular exhibits and displays, today's activities include the Loggers' Rodeo from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., the annual Youth-a-rama from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the rodeo arena and performances by The Whistling Midgets at noon, 2 p.m. and 3:45 p.m.

David Round, assistant manager of the fair, said that attendance on opening day of the fair was the second best opening day in its history. According to fair officials, the event began in Seattle, then moved to Redmond; Enumclaw became its home in 1949.

The fairground, rides and midway are open from 10 a.m. to midnight today. Exhibits and displays open at 10 a.m. and close at 10 p.m.
Single parents
They aren’t alone in their struggles

by Pat Jenkins
Unmarried parents aren’t alone in their sometimes difficult task of coping with day-to-day living and raising children without a husband or wife.

“They are certainly not alone if they belong to PWP—Parents Without Partners, which has as members 700 men and women in South King County.

“They belong to the group mainly for its social functions or to benefit from its informal psychological therapies, members of PWP all have something in common—namely, their place in a broken family. PWP membership includes 528 men and women, and so far, Chavez reported, membership has grown a myriad of chapters, the largest in the Puget Sound region.

“Among the group’s outings are fishing and trout farms, dances, movie outings, the parents’ children are in attendance.

“Two single parents decided in the mid-1970’s that persons like themselves needed an organization that would provide them regular social outlets, while at the same time serving as an advocate for people who must raise children without a spouse.

“They came up with Parents Without Partners, which has grown a myriad of chapters, including South King County’s Chapter 66.

“With 525 members from Des Moines, Federal Way, Tukwila, Renton, Kent, and Auburn, the local branch is one of the largest in the Puget Sound region.

“Many members of PWP are divorced, and so far, Chavez reported, their children have grown up with help from their mothers and fathers.

“Despite all the socializing and sharing of experiences, the problem of being a single parent remains, Chavez, while proficient in enjoying the single life, knows of the travails.

“‘The PRIMARY problem is that you don’t have the help of a partner or in raising a child,’ he said.

“A single parent can only be so busy before he begins to feel like he’s not doing enough raising kids for two people, he told others.

“Loneliness is another obstacle for some.”

“Long-time members are in attendance.

“We can help them to donate money to support social events. Excursions, the parents’ children are in attendance.

“The letter adds that “a $25 monthly contribution, for example, could provide, an emergency three-day supply of food for two weekly, or pay for a few nights in a low-cost motel.”

“Nailing that inflation has adversely affected both the flow of contributions and the price of the poor. Allison said that “there are more people in greater need” as a result of spiraling prices.

“The CONTRIBUTIONS, the letter explains, are tax deductible, and the center will give the donors who desire it public recognition.

“Requests of the letter are offered both an opportunity to take a first-hand look at the center’s operation and to participate in the activities of the emergency service unit’s advisory committe.

“Center staff members say that the unit has served 70 families in the last month.

“About 48 percent of these persons are elderly and live on fixed incomes. The remainder are children, and often, these are single parents, or have just moved here.

“Recent cutbacks in the federal food stamp program, the staff members say, have complicated the problems faced by the poor.

“These interested in donating should contact the multiservice center at 428-6414. Its address is 920 Blue Lake Road, in the old Mark Twain Elementary School building.

County council explores massive park bond issue

by Darlene Himmelsbach

A massive park bond that would pump millions of dollars into recreational facilities in unincorporated King County is being considered by the county council. Some of the projects that could get the most money locally include Redondo Beach and Seahurst Beach at $1 million each. Des Moines Creek is tentatively listed at $800,000 for passive development of trails and picnic areas. According to Joe Jennings, aide to the county council, a $100 million general obligation bond would pay the owner of a $23,000 home 33% a year over the next 30 years if that is chosen as the life of the bond.

Statisticians provided by the county planning department indicate there is a need for about $54,000,000 to fund parks projects in the Highline area and $90,000,000 for the port of Central Dist. 5 which includes White Center. Some of the countywide projects that could profit from the sale of bonds include a regional zoo which Councilman Bob Dunn has sought for several years and a major swimming pool facility. If your Uncle Fred and Aunt Esther are flying in from the farm to spend a few days in the big city, they'd better have reservations.

Otherwise, expect a couple of unhappy homesteaders become a brave family trying to find a room in the Seattle area's inns.

"This is true throughout the city," a clerk at the visitors office said.

The visitors bureau in the Seattle-King County Visitors and Convention Bureau said, "We did have a few rooms at the Lion Inn, the strip's largest lodge for the end of the month.

They're already filling up." They said their place has been booked up in the Seattle area's inns.

And we don't expect any unexpected houseguests because the visitors bureau said, "I would say it's normal in the tourist and convention seasons. And we don't expect any unexpected houseguests because we haven't any reservations. What happens to them, we don't know." The staff at the Traveler's Aid Office at Sea-Tac Airport is well informed about everything. According to one source, "When Seattle just goes crazy, there is virtually no room in the inn around hoping for a room."

In effect, it reminds one of searching for an open gas station. Once one of those infrequent items is unearthed, it doesn't take long for a line to form. The aid office has phone banks to area accommodations. Entire families can be seen making a helicopter for the phones and frantically calling every inn around hoping for a room.

Chances are, they'd have to set down for one north of Everett or south of Federal Way, according to an innkeeper at the Eastwind Motel in Federal Way. She said her place has been booked up in the Seattle area's inns.

Clark will describe mission in Buckley

Guest speaker for the Sunday evening service July 22 at First Baptist Church of Federal Way will be Rich Clark, missionary to the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. In the sermon beginning at 7 p.m., Clark will share some of his experiences in helping to establish a new church-type mission in the city of Buckley. Clark and David Quapha have served as a team during the past six weeks in collecting people, ranging places to use, and beginning Sunday services in the starting of a new church. Clark, who is also attending the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, is committed to the gospel ministry and has a background in spiritual matters having grown up in a Baptist pastor's home.

Library exchange

In an effort to aid consumers in fighting ever increasing grocery prices, Federal Way Library has initiated a coupon exchange box.

When visiting the library, residents of the Federal Way area are encouraged to clip coupons clipped from magazines and newspapers and keep them in a especially marked box near the library entrance. In return, donations to the coupon exchange box are small from the community.

"Many of us receive more coupons than we can use," said Librarian Loretta Becher, "and this is a good way to make them available to someone else who can use them." Lois Becher, assistant head librarian, said.

The Modern Mom
by Betty Woodley

If there's one character on the American scene whose favor it is well advised to gain, it's the paper boy. He can make or break your day. No one can believe in you unless he believes in your paper boy. He is the embodiment of your reputation.

The paper boy sets the tempo of your business. For some reasons beyond his control, the paper is behind schedule. He has a chain reaction throughout the community. Parents deliver babies without doctors, court's sworn officers arrive out of order.

Grass Roots Gardening

Are you planning to eliminate rotting fruit trees on the west, south or southwest sides of your house? Do not in any way allow south or southwest facing evergreen trees on the west, north and northwest sides of the house give additional insulation. Also using even trees on or near the walls may allow an inlet of cold air. If possible deflect rain water from eaves. These trees lend a leafy roof for these areas as well. Do not plant deciduous trees in any of these locations.

Here are a few suggestions to get the most out of your natural shade. The following pages include suggestions for the shady wall. Some of these suggestions are specific; others are general. Remember, trees are a long term investment and take advantage of them for both color and shade in your landscape. These activities may be modified dur- ing the fall or in Spring. When vines attach to trees or shrubs, they add to their beauty. These plants can sometimes be used to promote the circulation in the summer and to avoid winter cold air drafts, as well as to provide wind breaks and additional insulation. Find me a home where the family will fit...

Editor's note. This "House of the Month" feature has been selected on merits of design, decor, or other special features.

Where can you find a new comfortable four-bedroom family home on a quiet street for under $85,000? A home, in fact, that has room enough to enjoy it with? In Federal Way, at Conifer Construction's Evergreen Estates. Take a look this afternoon. The number of the model house is 2,096 square feet, finished living space plus a double garage for storage and workshop, and a carport plus a double garage for parking. The layout has a sensible traffic pattern which would actually allow a family of six or seven to enjoy their home.

How does the money stack up? That 9 and seven-eighths percent money is a conservative estimate. The builder is paying 5% of the allowable closing costs, or about $8,000, of which the buyer pays 50%. Monthly payment would be about $600 for principle and interest, taxes about $86 right now, and the fire district class is four, for a low homeowners' insurance rate.

Think about it. Where else can you do that? On the street where Conifer is building three others just like this one and in West Campus where there are three more. Take a look at this home from noon until dusk today. Call MacPherson's Federal Way office at 839-3892 or 927-7733 for information.

ENJOY YOUR INFLATION HEDGE

The best way to get people to talk about economics is to have them buy a house. People who worry about economics are thinking about the future - the problem of real estate is to deal with that future. The problem is not so much to sell houses, but to keep the people who buy them from selling them.

If you are a homeowner, you are doing it unknowingly because one of the oldest and worst hedges against inflation is the ownership of real estate. The cost of the house will stay fairly steady even in times of rising prices. The mortgage payments on a house are not a severe burden.

If you decide to sell your house, you can be confident - except in a forced sale - of getting back more money than before inflation hit. And, if you're in need of money and your house increases in value, your equity in your house becomes your potential borrowing power. So, if you're a homeowner, you've been an effective economist all your life and didn't know it.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate please phone or write to us. BRANCO REALTY, INC. offices. We're here to help.
