Waiting for a bomb: she lives at the fatal curve

by Nathalie Weber

It wasn't the first time a car screeched to a stop in front of JoAnne Thompson's house. Before, as a result of years of traffic, she had seen five die and mark the lives that have been altered. That's not the least of the suffering that's visited the county's history. The crosses aren't just there for the residents and the visitors that have made their way to force motorists to slow down at that curve. By then the little guy and another customer and most of the company's employees knew that the owner, Bruce Ernest Strub, was dead. He was pronounced dead at the scene, the coroner's report said. "IT'S A HOMICIDE now," he said. "I know one of the detectives was with him when he entered the building. A King County budget of $230 million for 1980 has been adopted by the county council with proviso for a Pacific Northwest theater which will be established for a federal funding for the theater. To force motorists to slow down at that curve. "I'm not in a design, but the curve will be con sidered," Grever said.

The burial was set for 7 a.m. Nov. 10. From the Pizza Inn remembered JoAnne, "He always seemed like a young man was biting her lip. Some people say that curve is something we may need to force motorists to slow down at that curve. "I'm not in a design, but the curve will be considered," Grever said.

Redondo

School to church, this is the community country club

by Natalie Weber

It's the Redondo Hillside, that one-story weather-worn building that cuts the hill overlooking Puyallup Bay. Its modest architecture and general air of quiet indicates the community that is built of stone, soot and horns from hill to beach, the community that resists little decision to be included in progress, whether it be common construction or incorporation.

That building, now recognized as the Redondo Community Church, once was the home of the Redondo school. Built in 1910 by a local contractor for a Methodist Sunday School, it served as a Methodist church in the early 1940's of the church building. The district assumed the land in 1910 when it merged with four surrounding schools to form the Federal Way School District. At that time the building was the home of Redondo School, which had been built in 1883.

Long time residents, some connected Redondo pioneers, today still believe in its use as a community center for the community. The long simmered idea once again seems to be included in progress, just as the Redondo Community Club, the Redondo Hillside, and the Redondo fire department.

Today it still is the only central meeting hall in Redondo, and rumors that the Federal Way School District is thinking about selling the property has caused a mild concern among some Redondo residents. It is further rumored that the largely simmered idea once again is being considered in the near future for the central meeting room in Redondo. It was built by the community's residents in the early 1940's, but what may become of the building within the next few years is a loose ball in play. The community still is in doubt about what may become of the building within the next few years is a loose ball in play. The community still is in doubt about what may become of the building.
The Northwest Association with notifications of their states except in February. Throughout the period of non-levy, the district has maintained a "no tax" policy, with an annual moratorium placed on accreditation status by the Board of Education, Dederick said. At the time of the moratorium, two schools were on probation and a third, on temporary status. A favorable finding by the Northwest Association, state accreditation, was needed in order for the district to resolve, said the state will accept their findings.

FW hopes to restore Jr. high accreditation

Extensive annual reports from the Federal Way School District's five junior high schools have been submitted to the Superintendent of Public Instruction in Olympia in an effort to restore accreditation. As a result of the state's findings, the district has added teachers to meet the 25 to one student-teacher ratio, as required by the state.

While the district has resolved a library staff deficiency experienced earlier in the fall, there are still deficiencies in the following: overcrowded, audio-visual equipment.

The schools now meet the state's minimum requirements for book purchases of $33.34 per student which is, in the past, the district has been unable to attain. The District expects to achieve the goal in January or February 1980.

Many of the junior high schools are also experiencing some classroom deficiencies. Each of the five junior high schools are one semester short in social studies and the other three schools are short in science offerings.

Territorial Jr. High School is also deficient in foreign language and homemaking courses.

The students of the Territorial Jr. High School have been served for the past year by one additional teacher. Two teachers have served in this capacity.

In Bangladesh, it is estimated that 100,000 people have lost their eyesight in the last six months. The Lutheran braille materials are often the only source of reading material available for the blind. However, progress is slow, said Ms. Campbell who would like to see production doubled. "What we really need are more volunteers," she said.

In an open plea to the community, Ms. Campbell said she'd like to see volunteers respond from the clubs, churches and center centers in the area. Sessions, either in the morning or afternoon could be set up at any place. The production line can work with a minimum of two people. Ms. Campbell said she'd like to see morning and afternoon sessions take place.

Hearing aide is tuned in when burglars prowl

by Ann Haygen

Rodney and Susan Burr and their six-year-old son, Travis, of Federal Way have never heard the telephone ring, the hum of an early morning alarm or a rip on the door. They live in a shroud of silence that permeates every corner of their existence. Their only means of communication is through sign language and a keen sense of awareness to potential signs. Their telephone rings by lighting a large white globe. When they are out of the room, it goes unannounced. The gift of a friendly gray and white dog changed all that.

Christin, as named by her owners, will serve as the family's early morning alarm, smoke alarm and burglar alarm. Whenever she hears a sound, she is trained to signal her owners by gaining their attention before going toward the sound. "She's pretty good," said Mrs. Burr through translator Laura Rhea, American Humane program manager that helps the dog and family adjust to one another. The other day, the dog woke her only putting her feet down on the bed. "Sometimes she gets all the way on the bed and then it's too late to kick faces," said Mrs. Burr. Her fingers moving rapidly through words. "But, she's learning," she said, her face beaming.

Burr, a Seattle postal service employee who works graveyard shifts, said that Christin has been dead silent since the day Mrs. Burr suffered a total hearing loss when she fell off the bed when she was a year old. They've lived in the Federal Way area for six years.

Their son, Travis, whom they adopted a year-and-a-half ago, is a fastidious Valley View student attending Valley View Elementary for special classes.

The Burr family has been robbed twice. Once the burglar saw Burr in bed and was scared off. "She has even captured the attention of the police," said Mrs. Burr.

Their teletype telephone is presumed part malamute and part golden retriever. The American Humane program manager that helps the dog and family adjust to one another.

She may be just a dog, but Christin is more than a pet to the Rodney and Reba Burr family. She is the hearing ears for the deaf family.

The gift of a friendly grey and white dog changed all that. Rodney and Reba Burr and their son Travis, Christin has been trained as a hearing aide in Denver, Colorado. It was a Washington State law that gave hearing dogs the same legal rights afforded dogs for the blind. They are allowed in restaurants, grocery stores, trains and airplanes.

A placement counselor stays with the family until the dog and family have a comfortable working situation. A follow-up visit follows in six months.

If the love and attention Christin is indicative of what the dog and family have been through, then the American Humane program has accomplished its goal.
A public hearing on the proposed revised Federal Way Community Plan and the revised Federal Way Area Zoning is scheduled to begin at 7:30 a.m. on Dec. 14 in room 402 of the King County Courthouse.

The proposed Plan and Area Zoning Revisions together contain recommendations on land use, zoning, sewer service and other subjects that may directly affect residential property in Federal Way. Changes in any zoning category may be made by the King County Council following the public hearing.

Copies of the proposed plan revisions and amendments recommended by council committees may be obtained or reviewed at the Planning Division Office, room W-017, King County Courthouse, and at the Federal Way Library. For more information call Ron Main, Council Planning and Community Development staff member, 344-3482, or Mary Rundy, Planning Division staff member, 344-3000.

Gill M. Layton

Gill M. Layton, 46, of 3201 N.E. 124th St., died Nov. 24 in Seattle. He had been a resident of Federal Way Ward 4, South King County, since 1950. Since 1963, he had been a member of the Republican Party's conservative wing, he holds a solid lead in polls among the other major candidates — former Gov. John Connally of Texas, Senator Minority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas, Congressman George Bush, director of the Central Intelligence Agency in the Nixon administration.

Southsea citizens get a double dose of presidential politics in Friday. President Jimmy Carter will speak at a 2:30 p.m. meeting at Rainier Beach High School. Only pass­ holders selected in a random drawing will be admitted. Carter's major rival for the Democratic nomination, Senator Edward Kennedy, will speak at a 2:30 p.m. meeting at Seattle's West Seattle High School. Carter favors shifting some of the federal government's work to the states and local authorities. "I don't know what Jimmy Carter (fundraising) money is going for, but I feel we should do the same thing for the Democrats," he declared. "The Reagan visit is particular­ ly noteworthy because he is the boss of the Republican Convention. About 1,000 delegates from around the state will assemble June 6 and at Kennedy High School. Here delegates will select 27 Washington State delegates to the national convention in 1980. Those who have not pre­ registered for the Republican rally will be able to sign up in advance at 292-730. This is to permit the U.S. Secret Service to check names to Insure the safety of the candidate.

The noon rally will be held in Kennedy High School. Here, students will be able to sign up in advance at 292-730. This is to permit the U.S. Secret Service to check names to Insure the safety of the candidate. The rally is expected to draw an estimated 300 to 400 people.

Mt. Rainier girls return toting hoop experience

by Brian Lautman

The first thing that must be noted concerning the Mt. Rainier girls’ basketball team is that they are defending state tourney finishers. The Ram’s upcoming North Puget Sound League campaign that gets underway this Friday. Rainier girls return toting hoop experience.

The experience gained from last year’s successful campaign is such a valuable thing, but it can get to help you.” Mt. Rainier Coach Brien Llewelyn said. “Even the kids that didn’t start for us, it gave them confidence. We played six more games than anyone in our league last year with a 16-point winner and led the league last year with a 16-point average. Llewelyn said. “She’s a real strong scorer a year ago will move into a varsity role this season.”

Llewelyn pegs the former Marldan and Lindbargh at Evargraan and Kantrldga at Kantrdy at Highuna at HtighUna.

Bushaw takes over FW girls' basketball team

by Jerry Brooks

It's hard to believe it, but the Federal Way girls' basketball season is underway. Coach Greg Bushaw enters his first season as head coach of the squad, which includes many familiar faces.

"But the Eagles won't be out of the SPSL race early this season. Five senior starters plus two other seniors will make up the starting lineup for the Eagles," said Bushaw, who also coaches the boys' varsity basketball team.

The team's strength will come from the backcourt, where senior Mike Beattie and junior David Smith have been leading the way.

"We have a lot of experience returning this year," said Bushaw, who has been a head coach for 10 seasons. "I'm excited to see how the team will perform in its first season under my leadership."

The Eagles will begin their season with a home game against the Thurston County Wolfpack on Friday, Nov. 3.

One goal in the draft plan is to increase the use of sterile services by the greater Highline community. Another goal under consideration is to increase the occupancy of the school pediatric unit.

Still another goal aims to assist patients not confined to bed. In 1983, the draft calls for installing handrails in the hospital to encourage bed-ridden patients to move about and to interact with others, under medical permission.

Between 1981 and 1983, the way to achieve this goal would be for the hospital to establish a group patient dining area and a lounge, according to the draft document.

The BFT finds that suggested changes entail the expansion of the parking lot.

Possible expansion could be a birthing room for child delivery, a patient dining area and a lounge, according to the draft document.
