The Federal Way First! Transition Team was formed to prepare for the opening of the new Fred Meyer store. Team members announced Friday that the store will be located at the southeast corner of Federal Way Boulevard and 312th Street, with an estimated completion date of late fall. The team hopes to gather information about the area and to engage in planning discussions with residents and representatives of local land-use districts such as the Fire District and the Kent School District.

The team hopes to perform initial planning studies to identify the needs of the city. They are currently in the process of securing funding, and they are in the process of setting a budget, renting an office and hiring a small staff and consultants. The self-appointed team is made up of 25 members, and they are committed to the city's future. The team is focused on ensuring that the new store will be a success.

It's time to put lid on tidelands teapot

On the tidelands of Commencement Bay, a $48 million teapot threat to the water quality of the Puget Sound. Gov. Gardner hints that residents of Federal Way don't want to pay for a tea party.

Protested by the city council race here, both voters and city leaders may fall to the urgency of the issue. That leaves the lobbying effort to veteran campaigners for the City of Tacom.

They haven't missed the chance, but have banned Gardner's staff repeatedly with their message, which suggests that "only a few" have griped about the failure to demand an environmental impact statement for the project.

They couldn't be more misleading. In fact, the naysayers on this project include King County, the Federal Way Community Council, citizens' groups on Browne Point and Dash Point, and Sen. Peter Van Nostrand of the 39th District. On Gardner's desk, in fact, is a piece of legislation authored by Van Nostrand, which would make an EIS mandatory. It only needs the governor's signature — and Gardner's staff is promoting the legislation.

Meanwhile, the City of Tacoma has mounted a biting public relations effort to sway the governor and the public. That effort, which includes considerable time and money, has been justified in the name of controlling cost, a pretty flimsy kind of logic.

It would make more sense if the city would acquiesce to citizen demand for the EIS, the public utilities gesture, one that spends ratepayer dollars to protect tidelands safety and to decide whether the tearop was worth having in the first place.

News will publish profiles on council

For voters still wondering how to make sense of the city council race:

Unless you request an absentee ballot from King County Records and Elections (360-486) by May 16, you must vote in person at regular polling places.

You are eligible as long as you are a registered voter, even if you don't vote in the city election.

About the candidates: They are running at-large, not by district. There are seven council seats up for grabs.

The two top votegetters in each position will go on the ballot this fall. The primary is crucial. It will eliminate all but 14 candidates.

To help you make your decisions, we will publish a comprehensive 28-page candidate profile (delivered to subscribers). Here's a sneak peak at Wednesday, May 18.

Our endorsements will be published separately on the same day (see inside).

For your convenience, endorsements will be repeated on Sunday.

Keep your mail in boxes and we hope you'll study the candidate profiles carefully, and will make your own thoughtful decision, for the sake of your new city.

Turley Wells (Office Club Employee)

"I would say so, yes. You want the people who serve you to live here."

Michael Bouchard (Flight Attendant)

"Yes, I think they do. They have to experience the lifestyle here."

Henry Hill (School Teacher)

"I feel they have to say a politician should live in the community they're representing."

Wil Nelton (Certified Public Accountant)

"Oh yes, I've been a longtime supporter of cityhood and I think they should live here."

Editor:

I have a nephew who says the city council elections are as exciting as horse racing. I don't know if any political elections are amusing anymore, but all of the candidates are getting their signs out there, and we're stuck with a number of political postcards. They're written by a handful of dark horses who can't write a sentence without a grammatical error. So far, one of the dark horses is the Mayor's Race for the city council race in Federal Way. The last day of this campaign is Friday, but the issues it seems to speak on the signs are nothing new. The most common answer is about how they're not in office, and (here's the kicker), they never have. Or they're hard to the point that they refuse to fit in with the rest.

Nautilus math wizards log big win

By RALPH BROSSING

If it takes eight minutes to saw a log into 10 pieces, what would the time be for the log into 10 pieces?

Well, so were members of the Nautilus Elementary School, fifth-grade Math Olympiad team. That is all they did for eight minutes on May 12.

"It was my problem and I asked my dad if I could take the test," said Charlie Minarsich. "I asked my dad if I could take the test; we would decide among ourselves depending on their difficulty.

The Nautilus team divided the problems among the four members. "The team would look at the harder problems," said Brian O'Byrne. "They then deduced that cutting a log into five pieces would require four cuts. If the cut took six minutes, that meant each cut took two minutes.

They then deduced that cutting a log into pieces would require time minutes. At two minutes a cut, that's 16 minutes.

"There were lots of trick questions," said Charlie. "Some of them were not that tricky enough to fool the Nautilus team very often.

By scoring 100 out of 123 points, Brian, Charlie, Allen and Marc, in order by aptitude on the last day of the fifth-grade division of the statewide Math Olympiad, they placed first in the fifth-grade division of a statewide competition.

Gas-tax increase stuck in gridlock

Bills or increases to the state's 32-cent state district special increase are a gas to try to pay for a commuter rail system. The increase is needed to fund the improvements of a statewide gasoline tax.

If they could devise their own tax package, the gas tax would be less of a tax than was desired. But, when Governor Gary Locke vetoed the proposal, the gas tax would be a gas to try to pay for a commuter rail system. The increase is needed to fund the improvements of a statewide gasoline tax.

The proposal also failed by a small margin of the state's 32-cent state district special increase is needed to fund the improvements of a statewide gasoline tax.

Realtors endorse 5 in council race

The Association of Realtors has endorsed 5 council candidates: Julie Gates in Position 1, Mark Freitas in Position 2, Bob Wood in Position 3, Ethan "Rick" Allen in Position 4, and Tim Stead in Position 5.

The panel asked each candidate several questions, but all but one candidate answered the same questions. Crowell said that the questions focused on "what kind of a community do they want people to be comfortable with." They also asked what they thought of development issues.

We welcome your large family gathering.

Eagles win seven of eight

After losing its first two league games, the Federal Way Raiders came back with a vengeance. They began their winning streak with a 7-3 South Puget Sound League victory over the Olympic Spartans, 6-5, on Thursday.

Jefferson had the bases loaded with two to tie it in the fourth. A Federal Way untouched ball was dropped by Olympic's third baseman, allowing a run to score. The Raiders came back to tie it in the fifth, when Federal Way scored four in the bottom of the fifth. The game ended 7-3 Federal Way, as Olympic saw their winning streak end at six.

On Friday, Federal Way continued its winning streak with a 7-3 match against Sumner. Tim Senigal scored the first Federal Way goal. Sean Peters scored the second on an assist from Dan Delia.

Saturday, the Raiders played the Federal Way coaches Mike Mograph, who said, "I was happy with the way the team played last week. But they still played hard and I think we've got a chance to tie the game.

"It's kind of a friendly game, and we're going to tie the game at 1-1 with 20:41 left in regulation after an Olympic goal from By CHERY MINGORI
