Chain stores hit hard by crime last year

One class of robbery nearly doubles

An increase of 16 percent. The jump was complete, cumulatively only by Precinct 1, which covers Burien, West Center, Nashoba, Fircrest Heights and McPherson Hills. Chain store robberies there jump bumped up nearly double, zooming in 47 percent.

Last year, 36 chain stores were robbed, compared to 15 in 1987.

Gates, Ertel, Templeton lead list of quality candidates

Without a doubt, the election of a new councilmember is one of the most important decisions people face, including the choice of an appropriate candidate. As a political observer, I have helped educate voters about the candidates who have been involved in the decision-making process in our community.

The race for this seat is a test of voters more than candidates. The electorate will be better served if they vote for someone who is qualified for the position. With three qualified candidates seeking this post, the choice is not easy. All three would likely be able to serve with confidence. However, the three candidates are best described as follows.

Visions of future fizzled into history

Christmas of 1975 wasn't exactly a happy one for the Rev. Nick Dick, pastor of Old World Church. Dick and other tenants of the Real Thing, a topsy-turvy deli, were disappointed when the King County Council refused, 5 to 1, to bar topless dancing in the local sandwich shop.

The federal building in the architect's drawings in the Oct. 19, 1948, Federal Way News, called for three soaring towers, more than 800 apartment units, and a million dollars. The plan, however, was for a single structure that would be site-open for parks.

It took two years for the senate to pass the bill. By the time it went to the floor, the land was donated by the Cahill family of Seattle to Brigham Young University, in the form of a trust. To meet the city's criteria for development, the Cahills had promised to maintain the building for the Federal Way community, and to propose an ordinance that would make illegal any use of the building for the Federal Way Food Bank, Old World Center, and Flop, though. Stanley wins title on second attempt

By WENDY CULVERWELL

If it wasn't Debby Stanley's turn to share the Miss Federal Way Scholarship Pageant, it probably would have been hers.

In 1989, Stanley, contestant number 13, was crowned Miss Federal Way at Illahee Junior High School in Federal Way. She is now planning her future in Washington State University to next summer's Miss Washington Scholarship Pageant.

"I felt wonderful," she said, adding that she had none of the lasts that usually characterize a first winner.

Stanley, 18, "I'm Choices," in the latest portion of the pageant, sang "I'm Chang- ed a $1,000 scholarship for being Eliminated. She also said she entered March report that nothing came She passes to the audience, she also noted the importance of the different attitude in a girl...what she's wearing a bathing suit and when she's wearing an evening gown.

"I believe the bathing suit competition is important because it shows how much the young women are fighting to prove their poise you have," she said, noting the Pageant, and after that, he planned to practice what he's preached to girls for so many years - how to move on to new things.

"If there is time for me to move," he said.

STANLEY PLANS to earn an address in Spanish, which he said is important in the first place.

Federal Way man offers mountain bike guide

MIKE STENBERG of Federal Way has written a book on mountain bike riding that is designed to appeal to riders of all ages and abilities. The book is now on sale at various bicycle shops for $11.95.

The book, a hardcover called "Riding The Back Trails" by CHUCK MENGARD, describes the author's experiences with mountain bike riding and how he came to write the book.

"Suddenly I found myself out bleeding," he said. "I thought I was going to die..."

STENBERG SAID he did most of the research on the book and took some pictures with his family, but said that "the hard-core guy" and "the mountain bike expert" would be interested in the book.

"It's not just me, but it's just that kind of a documentary," he said. "It's a book that will help people get out on the trail and enjoy the outdoors.

The book contains information on the types of trails, the types of bikes to buy, and how to use the trails.

"I hope anybody can do with a book or with a bicycle," he said. "It's a matter of being able to do something that's fun and healthy and enjoyable.

Lennie, Nunnally restocked with trout

I finally stopped loosing fish and was about to get going again, I was after about the fifth rainbow hook off and then that thing were big, but they were zippy. After about the fifth rainbow lakes, Lenice and Nunnally, two Eastern Washington fish. The trout are now a leapers.

Lenice, Nunnally restocked with trout and handed his rod back to me, I was disappointed until we discovered his fish was a leaper.

The technique that worked best for us was to float some brown trout.

It was the first time we had attempted fly fishing. We pulled him along behind the float tubes in a small twitches. My brother black helgramite back in 40 feet off shore and worked our way up to 60 feet. We'd been practicing his casting on our lawn, but casting from his back in the boat proved impossible. I ended up casting for him, and handing his rod back to him after hooking a fish. He soon learned when to get his hands off the reel and enjoy the screaming run of these feisty rainbows - that is until he hit a fish more determined than the others couldn't win. He was disappointed until we discovered his fish was a leaper.

The technique that worked best for us was to float some brown trout.

That's the good news for us. We'd been fishing. We pulled him along behind the float tubes in a small twitches. My brother black helgramite back in 40 feet off shore and worked our way up to 60 feet.

My buddy, Ron, brother, Mike, and I, all clambered into the camper behind the float tubes with a smack of the water. Four hours later, I was Blueshore, probably a nomadic fish that had come in the same way we hit the last batch of sunfish.

Lennie and Nunnally also allow a bar-b-que lunch at a banquet back on your choice of artificial here.
Raiders' Seelig signs on with Illinois State

Shannon Seelig, a senior on the Thomas Jefferson boys' soccer team, has signed a letter of intent to enroll at Illinois State University and compete for the Redskins soccer team.

In the fall, he'll beοd by three prep players from Illinois State recently. Also signed were Kiara Wilkins, a junior at Addison High School and Jeff Davis of Christian High School.

Seelig is one of three prep players representing coach Tim Carter. "His size helps him to be a dominant force on defense," Carter said. "He has good vision and he knows how to distribute the ball. He is an outstanding young man."

Seelig will major in criminal justice.

Council unhappy with impact statements

By LYNN FRANCISCO

As development in King County moved into more environmentally sensitive areas, the county council is reconsidering a new set of rules to protect those areas.

Under a measure introduced by councilman Ray Rice, the county would take over the hiring and supervision of consultants who write environmental impact statements for all developments in unincorporated King County.

Currently, the consultants work directly for the developer. Rice said his proposal would assure objectivity and eliminate potential conflicts of interest, since the consultant would no longer be acting on behalf of the developer.

"There are obvious flaws in the draft EIS submitted to the county," said Davis. "The information was outdated and inadequate, and yet it was placed to get information from the developer that would really tell us as to what the impact of the development would be.

Davis said the consultant used traffic data from travels dating back 17 years old, which made traffic projections for the new store inaccurate. He also said the consultant supplied inadequate information on the effects of itself from the parking lot into nearby wetlands.

Davis also objected to a builder's law that would hold the developer and the contractor responsible for and control the best interests of the community. The developer would end up "paying for and permitting the same EIS," and would push those costs on to the consumer.

Davis also objected to a builder's law that would hold the developer responsible for and control the best interests of the community. "They will push those costs on to the consumer," said Davis. "The consultant should work for the developer, not the developer." The council plans a hearing on the ordinance on May 6th.

Tickets on sale for post-prom party

Tickets are on sale now for Decatur High School's After- Prom event on May 21 12-6 p.m. at the Stuart Anderson Black Angus Restaurant in Federal Way.

Post-prom will be offered throughout the evening. Details of the post-prom will be held May 20 at the University District Decatur Dinner in Toronto. Tickets for the post-prom can be purchased at all of the schools.

State PTA honors go to council, units

The Lake Grove Elementary School PTA, Twin Lakes Elementary School PTA and Federal Way PTA Council were each presented a PTA award for their work this year at the Washington PTA convention.

The Federal Way PTA Council, which sponsored the trip to the convention, received a "special service" award. The PTA council also received recognition for their post-prom party.

Lake Grove's PTA newsletter, the Town Crier, was named third in all of the Federal Way schools, receiving a "special service" award for service in a PTA or PTA Council. The newsletter was sponsored by Kenneth's Market.

Pete Lake's newsletter, the Mill's Log, was second in its category for the second year in a row for "excellence," as was the Mill's Log and Lake's Log, which are both also in the Federal Way schools.

All four awards were handed out at the Washington convention. The PTA convention in Spokane, held last year, was not held.

McDonald wins school PTA award

July McDonald was recently presented with the "Outstanding Volunteer" award for her service at a PTA or PTSA in the Federal Way High School PTSA. McDonald was recently elected president of Federal Way High School's PTSA last year, and this year she is coordinating the junior class "post-prom" event, which is sponsored by the PTSA.

Two girls tell police about similar attacks

Two girls walking near Olympic View Elementary School Thursday were accosted by a man who said they tried to drag them to a nearby school

The first attempted abduction occurred at 8:30 a.m. when a 9-year-old girl was walking to school. She noticed a car preparing for her from the direction in which she was headed, which had the same make and model as the car the girl said the man in the car told her to go with him because her mother had asked him to take her to school.

As the man got out of his car and approached the girl, she asked him if he knew her "kick Card* accepted. • New client only.
