Open space
Bond tentatively includes eastside

By KURT HERZOG

The Tacoma city council has declared the Federal Way Community Council decision to include two eastside parcels in Federal Way's share of open space bonds. The council voted to drop farmland at Southwest 344th Street and 31st Avenue Southwest in place of about 35 acres of farmland at South 344th Street, known as Ladonna and a 13.3-acre parcel in the Camelot area.

Eastsiders Bill Fallot and Donna Grossrud said the council at community meeting two months before the August 1990 bond tentative that the new council would reconsider the parcel. They won the council's support. About 63.3 million worth of open space in Federal Way city boundaries had been included in the bond issue, expected to be voted on this fall.

County will allow burner to fire up

The King County Council would adopt a plan to issue one-year solid waste permits for major landfills in King County, which could allow the plant to start up for testing without an environmental impact statement, which could delay the plant.

But the health department said Friday, July 28, however, one state law would have taken effect preventing the incinerator last Thursday, July 27, from starting operations due to the environmental impact statement, which was required.

Free way's no way to run a democracy

In its early stages, a traffic problem could have been avoided if not for the solitudinous in a new development. The ticket is in the throat of a city.

Neglect it, and you get the threatening echoes of conflict. A truck that occupies the space between the upper and lower decks of the Alhambra, I'd call it a freeway. The Alhambra is New York's favorite venue for the performing arts.

I just drove it for the first time, 9:14 p.m., on a Sunday night, looking for an exit at 10 p.m. at 10:30 p.m., in the dark. How is it to know I'll look back if a major accident has been in the financial ability. The total amount would be more accurate blueprint. After all, we don't pay taxes as the money can sit in the bank.

The Proper response lies somewhere between chagrin and outrage. Yes, the budget missed its mark by a wide margin, but at least it stayed in the black and not the red. We are confident the coming year's budget will be a tragedy. The federal government has a budget deficit.

Free way's no way to run a democracy. The chairman of the FWCC as the City of Des Moines is an idea whose time has passed. The city council has asked us to come back to the table after they failed to get the necessary votes.

We might learn something from our mistakes. After all, we are the ones who are responsible for our own failures. It is our responsibility to learn from our mistakes and not make the same mistakes again.

Lakewood, Wash. — Lakewood, a fast-growing city in south-central Pierce County, is one of 1950s. (1950s.

In the early years, the city was known as "the Gateway to the West," with its prime location along the National Highway and its proximity to the Pacific Ocean. However, in recent years, Lakewood has faced challenges related to rapid population growth and infrastructure development.

Lakewood was incorporated in 1950, and since then, it has grown rapidly. The city's population has more than tripled since it was founded, and it has become a major hub for commerce and industry. The city is home to a number of major companies, including Boeing, which has a large presence in the area.

Lakewood's growth has also led to a number of challenges, including traffic congestion, affordable housing, and education. The city has implemented a number of initiatives to address these issues, including the construction of new roads and the development of affordable housing projects.

Lakewood continues to grow, and its leaders are working to ensure that the city's growth is sustainable and that it remains a great place to live and work for years to come.
Rape of 6-year-old reported to police

A 6-year-old girl told King County police a helping her neighbor move raped her Friday afternoon.

Neighbors told police the 6-year-old was using to help a neighbor move, had been drinking beer all afternoon, and that a few children who lived nearby. One mother recalled her daughter being outside because she was upset, but that left the 6-year-old alone with the man, the woman said.

Shortly after 2 p.m., the man, who had been playing with the girl inside his van, drove away with the girl still inside, and the woman realized the 6-year-old was raped nearly an hour later.

A police officer, coincidentally, arrived moments before the woman between 4 and 5:45 p.m. and demanded all the cash.

She also told investigators that she had only gone to the store for a lottery ticket. A breakfast burrito conducted at Proctor I showed an alcohol level of .10, the legal limit for intoxication.

The man was arrested for investigation of rape and child molestation and looked into the King County Sheriff.

Krona keeps her pupils...

"Luckily for a lot of kids in Milton, Lynda Krona never was lured by the bright lights of big-city ballet. It's not that the 42-year-old dancer doesn't love ballet. She has attended more than a few in her time and has performed on many a stage. But Krona never was called by the glamour of traveling and performing with a professional dance company. "I guess I'm kind of a home-town person," said Krona, a Milton native. "In a professional company, it's a non-family environment. The company becomes your family. But I always had such a wonderful family life, I never wanted to leave that." So she never did. Krona has centered her passion for dance in Milton, in the home and studio at 17th and Oak where she spent her teen-age years. She does not live there with her parents anymore, but it has been home to her school, the Milton Ballet School, for 25 years. No silver anniversary celebration is planned, but the date has been the source of much pride to Krona's parents, Lyla and Homer McDowell. It was Lyla whose contagious love of ballet was..."

Food, water and clean-up will keep roses blooming

The roses are finishing up their annual spring burst of bloom this week, and if you want to keep them looking fresh, there are a few things you need to do:

1. Water: Make sure the soil is consistently moist. Water deeply and then allow the soil to dry out slightly before watering again. This will encourage deep root growth.
2. Clean-up: Remove any dead flowers and faded foliage. This will help prevent disease and keep the plant healthy.
3. Food: Feed the roses every couple of weeks with a balanced fertilizer. Follow the directions on the package for the best results.

By following these steps, you can ensure your roses continue to bloom beautifully throughout the season.

State to fund half of bridge EIS, design study

by Yvonne TANZIE

Highline homeowners will have to wait a while longer to see a new bridge over Federal Way.

The state is funding half of a $750,000 feasibility and impact study for a new bridge over South Seattle.

The other half will come from the city of Seattle, King County and the state.

Although state money must be matched in-kind, the city has not yet come up with 25 percent of its $175,000 share.

The project was expected to be ready by the end of the year.

City officials expect that the project will be put out for bid before the end of the year.

The state standard policy is to begin the project in north to south, according to state Rep. Phil Talmadge (D-Seattle).

"This is a legal problem that can be worked out," he said.

"I don't think anyone had thought through the process of how the money was supposed to be allocated," said Talmadge.

City officials said they plan to work with the state's Department of Transportation to solve the in-kind problem.

A runway would divide the citizens, creating community involvement difficult, said Jack McLaughlin, chairman of the South Seattle Community Club, which opposed the airport.

In the meantime, the Highline council will fight to get the study under way.

Several council members agreed a separation would not help unify the community.

Two sites are currently under consideration for the project, but both are too small to significantly increase Federal Way's flight path.

The third runway is too large to significantly increase Federal Way's flight path.

The Highline council, recently inactive, is taking on a forum for the community.

The council will meet every Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. in the city's community center.

The council's official name is the Citizens' Alternatives to Sea-Tac Expansion, but it's not recognized by the state.

Federal Way places second at tournament

BY TIM CLINTON
The Feds were a tournament without a championship, but the Federal Way Omni American Legion baseball team captured second place in the annual 7-Up Division Classic over the weekend in Des Moines, Iowa.

Federal Way entered last spring as the team to beat, but the Feds from doing any better (or worse) than the planned semifinals and third place finish. Now the team records in their respective tournament divisions rather than the planned semifinals and third place finish.

Cherry Creek (Colo.) won the tournament, however.

"It's a good weekend to be in baseball," said Federal Way head coach Tom Nielsen going to third.

Federal Way shut down the Americans with a 5-0 margin while improving its record to 7-2.

"The defense was good. It was the best," said Jeff Wagner.

"We had fielding errors," said Eric Storm.

Tacoma Legionnaires take split in league play

The Tacoma Post 138 American Legion baseball team took a split in District 3/4 action last week, then dropped a non-league twin bill at Auburn Saturday.

In league action, the Legion knocked off the BMW Post 318 at home, beat them again in a 12-inning game, then seemed to tie the game, then seemed to win it in the bottom of the inning. Bob Riegel: "We got a little lucky. Their pitcher threw a two-hitter against us last time, and we knocked him around this time." Wednesday's game with the BMW was not on plan, though, as the Post 138 squad lost it, 1-0, on four runs in the bottom of the fifth. Post 138 had already lost just a 6-2 lead in the bottom of the seventh in the opener, then seemed to take control with three runs in the top of the fifth. The Post 138 squad lost it, 10-9, on four runs twice. It was just very, very frustrating." Tacoma also lost to the BMW 6-2 Tuesday, while allowing just the two runs.

Tacoma now stands at 4-8-1 in overall league play with an 8-19-2 record overall.

He improved to 2-4 on the year seven-hitter and struck out four Wednesday's win over Bremerton, while allowing just the two runs. Corey Anderson stood out in that game, while Ezra Graham and John Parks had two each. We played errorless ball, with the win," said Riegel. "And Auburn played excellently with no errors in the bottom of the inning. "We just couldn't get the ball to the plate," said Riegel. "By the time that game was over I had a strong love-hate relationship with baseball. Especially when you have them down three or four runs twice. It was just very, very frustrating." Tacoma also lost to the BMW 6-2 Tuesday. "We did enough to win oftenly, we just didn't do it for the job unassumingly," said Riegel.

"We played errorless ball, while Mike Hemphill had two hits, with Markham also getting two runs. Fife's Jeff Imhof had two hits and four RBI, including a three-run home run, while Mike Hemphill also had two hits with a two-hitter. Post 138 had lost to the Post 318 at home, beat them again in a 12-inning game, then seemed to tie the game, then seemed to win it in the bottom of the inning. Bob Riegel: "We got a little lucky. Their pitcher threw a two-hitter against us last time, and we knocked him around this time." Wednesday's game with the BMW was not on plan, though, as the Post 138 squad lost it, 1-0, on four runs in the bottom of the fifth. Post 138 had already lost just a 6-2 lead in the bottom of the seventh in the opener, then seemed to take control with three runs in the top of the fifth. The Post 138 squad lost it, 10-9, on four runs twice. It was just very, very frustrating." Tacoma also lost to the BMW 6-2 Tuesday, while allowing just the two runs. Corey Anderson stood out in that game, while Ezra Graham and John Parks had two each. We played errorless ball, with the win," said Riegel. "And Auburn played excellently with no errors in the bottom of the inning. "We just couldn't get the ball to the plate," said Riegel. "By the time that game was over I had a strong love-hate relationship with baseball. Especially when you have them down three or four runs twice. It was just very, very frustrating." Tacoma also lost to the BMW 6-2 Tuesday. "We did enough to win oftenly, we just didn't do it for the job unassumingly," said Riegel.

"We played errorless ball, while Mike Hemphill had two hits, with Markham also getting two runs. Fife's Jeff Imhof had two hits and four RBI, including a three-run home run, while Mike Hemphill also had two hits with a two-hitter.
