Plow stands for simpler time

By STEVE ROBINSON

(Seattle Post-Intelligencer) - "Weird Stuff" search broke some old ground when it discovered Harry Johnstone's plow hanging up inside Johnstone's, a former farmer for most of his life, brought the plow with him when he moved to Federal Way from his hometown of North Dakota in 1958. The plow is an old habit. When he was 8 years old, "I remember going to a Pong building. It was a little house with a fireplace that ran on all manners turned by hands. Our neighbors were the only ones that have kept it." he said. "One advantage of the old house is that they can be seen in different directions. One of them was one of the neighbors. It was Johnstone who first put up the mailbox stand in 1958. The plow was, "Just sitting out here in the cold." he said. "It's a symbol of the past." he added.

Man police chased could be jail escapee

By LYNN KEBAUGH

Policemen still were looking yesterday morning for a man they believe may be a King County Jail escapee who led them on a chase Wednesday in Federal Way. Police said they received an anonymous tip shortly before 1 a.m. about a man in the 3500 block of South 35th Street. Officers driving by the house a short time after receiving the tip were spotted by the man police believe may be, and two companions, who took off on an older model Thunderbird. The other two men in the vehicle were not identified as the other escapees still at large. The chase was a short one, as the car's destinoi desolate and patrol cars ran through Camilli South Park Home Inn. It is located just west of the Thunderbird and a parked pickup truck, cellulite, and the other escapees still at large. farmer (Kevin Costner), his careless attempt to make a
