Position 5 offers keen contrasts

If a movie director placed a call to central casting for a character to play a city council member, Jim Handmacher probably would get the part. He's the kind of lawyer who's been active in community issues and is running against Fred Wood in the Federal Way City Council election.

It's hard to know what part Wood might get. Wood hasn't responded to letters or calls to her office. It's hard to know what part Wood might get.

Handmacher was originally involved in a primary city council contest, but later failed to return responses to a Federal Way News questionnaire. Handmacher's campaign officials explained only that questions about his voting habits were "incendiary," according to his attorney. Nevertheless, he does appear active in running for the city council and has attended several meetings sponsored by the Association of Washington Cities, a chamber of commerce that encourages civic participation.
The Associated Press notes that Handmacher is active in several community issues and is running for mayor.

Handmacher was frequently quoted by local newspapers as a "rabid" supporter of the Federal Way First legal council and earlier in a temporary export when he was chair of the Federal Way Community Land Council.

Handmacher is undoubtedly an expert on city council serving as a resource to The Georgetown Potato. He has capitalized on his expertise during the campaign and says, "But Wood told pretty much the whole story.

Barden rated 'very good'

King County Councilman Paul Barden bested his opponent, Democrat Michael Shanks, in the ratings handed out this week by the Municipal League of King County. The non-partisan citizens' group gave Republican Barden a rating of "very good," while Democrat Shanks received an "adequate" rating.

The Municipal League bases its ratings on several criteria, including the candidates' "knowledge of the issues," "their involvement in community activities," and "their 'integrity, leadership, and ability to describe a vision.'"

In the King County Executive's race, the League rated Republican incumbent Tim Hill 'adequate,' while his opponent for Position 2, Ron Lynn, was rated "poor." Independent candidate Michael Shanks was rated "poor."

In the Port Commission races, Gary Grant was rated "good," and one of his Democratic opponents, Bruce Hillyer, "very good."
The other Democrat in the Executive's race, the League rated "adequate" rating.

Experience should help Eagle girls

By CHUCK MINOR

With the exception of the Federal Way girls soccer team which began its campaign in 1985, the Federal Way girls soccer program continues to develop into an equal force to be reckoned with.

The girls in a Federal Way High School were on hand this week for league play in the South Puget Sound League. Their first game was against Kentwood, and the Federal Way girls opened their season with a 3-2 victory.

Youth soccer: The competition will still be stifled with the addition of four new teams to the league.

By GARY PETERSON

All of the Federal Way-area high school girls soccer teams would appear to have a shot at placing well in the South Puget Sound League standings.

Of the three Federal Way-area girls teams, two of the best returning talent resides in senior Christy Vance and junior Karen Berlin, who are already qualified for both district soccer tournaments and finished in the middle of the pack.

According to coach Doug Baldwin, his team is hoping to improve on its 1-3-1-4 season last year.

"We have six seniors returning," Baldwin said. "The kids have been working hard in the off-season, and we are hoping to emerge as a stronger team this year."

To begin the year, Federal Way hosted White Center, and the Eagles won 3-0. Baldwin said the Eagles will be "very strong this year, but again they are a young team and will have to work through the growing pains of playing against league opponents."

"They are a young team, so we will be watching them closely for the rest of the season," he added.

Golfers hope to be contenders

By JOHN MILLER

John Silvia and Jeremy Hainline have both qualified for their respective state tournaments for years, but this year, FWSA president David Zumwalt, Dan McGarva and Mike Sharp, the Mills brothers - senior David and junior Sarah Berlin - returned to the state tournament.

"My wife and I have been qualified for the state tournaments for years, and we have always been hoping to make it," said Zumwalt. "We have been working hard all year to improve our game, and we are hoping to do well in the state tournament."

"We have been blessed to have three straight years of excellent golfers, and to have the opportunity of retaining the league three straight years, that is definitely the best way you can end your career," said McGarva.

"We have been following the boys all year, and we are hoping to see them improve on their previous performance," said Berlin. "The boys have been working hard all year, and we are hoping to see them do well in the state tournament."

"It will be hard to do better than last year's state tournament," said Zumwalt. "We have been working hard all year to improve our game, and we are hoping to do well in the state tournament."

The Federal Way youth soccer association, which has been in operation for over 10 years, is looking forward to another successful season. The association has 12 teams, 30 individuals going on to state, and 23, in Tumwater, with the top three individuals going on to state. Despite his low-keyed approach, Von Doehren said. "I am very much looking forward to the season, and I am confident that we will have a strong team this year."
