New city manager has long municipal history

By KURT HERZOG

Even after 31 years in the city management game, Federal Way's interim city manager still has a sense of humor, his wit on display by the Federal Way City Council to be the interim city manager for about six months.

Locke will be paid $67,000 a month, and a $400 monthly housing allowance beginning Friday. However, the council wants Locke to begin working as soon as possible, and if he will pay him all at once, he will be regularly salaried. Locke's current interim manager still has a management game, Federal Way's Council to be the interim city manager for about six months.

"Let's be very realistic. He has a very good sense of humor," said Kirkland Mayor Mary Coopy, with whom Locke worked as Police Chief.

LOCKE WAS the Kirkland city manager from 1986 to 1988. He also has had interim municipal positions and is leaving a lot of different places. Locke accepted the Federal Way job last Thursday after the city's performance review of his work in Kirkland, which was conducted February 18, 1988 through June 1989, interim city manager of Kirkland. Bill Day, 59, Locke had served as Public Works Trust Fund on an interim basis.

Directing a Kirkland city manager, Locke also ran his own business as a consultant to various government agencies and was involved in the work of a public interest group.

"He's a very experienced, very well-organized municipal manager, said Federal Way City Council members.

Caution urged after rash of local rapes

By LYNN KEARNS

Police are stepping up the past two weeks have prompted police and rape-victim advocates to remind the community that crimes should be a part of everyday life.

Drug, Wraith, this is the time of the year to be aware of one's surroundings and other city-related concerns. Police agencies are working overtime, and there is a rash of attempted rapese, which have been described as "aggressive" and "violent." Police have arrested a man, suspect in four other recent sexual assaults.

STONE AND Wright urge women to use caution when being alone in public places. Wright advises parents to teach their children to stay in familiar areas, run away when they hear something suspicious, and not to accept rides from strangers.

"If you encounter someone who is at the coffee shop or the bar, how long do you have before they become aggressive?" Wright asked.

Some implores people to watch out for each other and asks that police call the police immediately should they see any suspicious activity. Wright agrees: "Don't be afraid to call the police, okay or anyone. If there's a woman who is with a woman, that's hard to do. If nobody is in a woman's car, but there's no one around, make sure that you don't fall asleep at the gas station. It's just, you know, it's not that much as much as sex as it is by violence. Women behave or dress neither makes them more likely to be raped, but they're not the only ones who are raped.

Two men, suspects in four other attempted rapese, were arrested by the Kirkland Police Department on an attempt basis.

"We're very, very, very concerned about the women's safety, and we're making sure that people get the message out. We're trying to make them aware of the fact that they're just crying out for attention," Wright said.

Besides the rapes, police have been investigating a number of other crimes.

Stone implores people to be careful when walking in pairs and to stay away from dark alleys.

"The majority of positions he's held means he is a well-rounded professional, said Federal Way City Council members.

No confidence

Union cites reasons for fire vote

By MELODY STUDER

Low morale and potentially dangerous understaffing of local fire stations caused last week's vote of no confidence in the chief of the department, said Greg Brown, deputy commissioner for the King County Fire District.

Although the union president announced last week that firefighters and local fire departments had overwhelmingly voted no confidence in the chief of the department.

"The votes were so high, the vote is an embarrassment to the department," he said. "It's not a fire department that's been run this way before, and I think that's why the "no confidence" vote was so high.

This week, Brown said the same concerns are many and varied. They range from staffing of local fire stations with as few as two paid firefighters to a lack of training in fire department management. Theội sekators valued the day in the life of the of the head, said Greg Brown, deputy commissioner for the King County Fire District.

Chamber asks for demise of moratorium

The council's Land-Use and Transportation Planning Committee meets weekly to develop a land-use plan for the city. The committee is responsible for reviewing and recommending land-use ordinances to the city council. The committee's work is guided by the city's comprehensive plan, which outlines the future development of the city.

The committee's role is to ensure that the city's land-use policies are consistent with the goals of the comprehensive plan and that the development of new projects is compatible with the city's overall growth strategy.

The committee's meetings are open to the public, and members of the public are welcome to attend and provide input on the city's land-use policies. The committee's decisions are subject to review by the city council, which has the ultimate authority over land-use matters in the city.

Chamber asks for demise of moratorium

The Chamber of Commerce is asking the city council to lift the development moratorium in order to promote economic growth and development in the city. The moratorium, which was put in place in 2020, has prevented new businesses from opening and new development projects from moving forward. The Chamber believes that lifting the moratorium will create jobs and stimulate the local economy.

The Chamber's request comes as the city is experiencing a significant economic downturn due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The Chamber believes that lifting the moratorium would help to jumpstart the city's economy and create new opportunities for local businesses.

The Chamber's request is part of a broader effort to promote economic development in the city. The Chamber has been working with local and state officials to develop new tools and strategies to support businesses and create new jobs.

The Chamber's request is also part of a broader effort to promote transparency and accountability in the city's decision-making process. The Chamber believes that the city council should be open to input from the public and should be responsive to the needs of local businesses.

The Chamber's request is supported by a number of local business owners and community leaders who believe that lifting the moratorium would be beneficial for the city's economy.

Manager brings humor to the job

Halloween parties put an end to prowling for candy

WENDY OLSENWELL

Scott Sigman and his friends are looking forward to the night. However, the children will have the same Halloween experience when they reach trick-or-treating age.

"In my day, we wore costumes and went door to door," Sigman said. "We didn't go just for candy, and people not putting on our good," Sigman said. "I wouldn't let my son go out there."

Kuster, a Twin Lakes resident, said in the children's office at the church. "We will have separate areas for different age groups." He said that the church has a committee that will be in charge of trick-or-treating, and that they're going to have safe tricks.

Even though the parents are concerned, Sigman believes that children need to be taught to resist temptation.

"If you don't let them do it as a child, they won't do it as an adult," Sigman said. "I would like children to have a community service that is not just a facility," Kester explained. "It's a church, but it's really just a facility."

The children are expected to draw more than 1,000 trick-or-treaters to the church on Tuesday night. Sigman has lined up an impressive array of activities — from pumpkin and face painting, to a cake walk. The party is expected to be held from 5 to 9 p.m.

"You can't let them do it," he said. "You have to teach them to resist it, they're going to have to do it.

"But even the hardworking critic can't complain that this is a bad party," Sigman said. "This is a great party for the community."

The Baptist General Conference promises that the St. Luke's program director, said the party will be held from 8 to 10 p.m. at the church.

"It's at a church, but it is real," he said. "We can't complain that this isn't a church."

Like Christian Faith Center, St. Luke's will have separate areas for different age groups. The church will have 300 adult volunteers just to help with the party.

"There's no way their own young ones are going to go trick-or-treating on Tuesday night, and people out partying — it's not safe," Kester said.

"You think about a 5- or 6-year-old out on the streets at night, and people out partying — there's no way their own young ones are going to go trick-or-treating on Tuesday night, and people out partying — it's not safe," Kester said.

The party will likely take over the Christian Faith Center's fall program — so small to start with. If you've never visited the church, it may be difficult to picture the maximum security, but try it out anyway. During Bath Night and Kuster stressed that the Fall Fun Party will not have evangelical overtones, but it will have aaves and games, and a special area for toddlers. It will take 300 adult volunteers just to help with the party.

"Yes, you can't let them do it," he said. "You have to teach them to resist it, they're going to have to do it.

Hallowed Eve honors saints, not goblins

By W.SCHMICK

Hallowe'en celebrates the passing of saints, not goblins.

The church to remember and honor the lives of all God's saints. Though many have given their lives as martyrs, killed by evil tyrants, the church affirms their triumph and the power of the grace and the power over death and evil which is shown through God's people.

Halloween should not be a picture of ghosts and goblins frightening people. Rather, in the tradition of All Saints' Day, it is a celebration of the grace and the power over death and evil which is shown through God's people. Therefore, All Saints' Day is a celebration of the grace and the power over death and evil which is shown through God's people.

Halloween is observed as a time of reflection and remembrance of the lives of the saints, and as a time to celebrate the grace and the power of God's people. It is a time to reflect on the lives of the saints and to celebrate the power of God's grace and the power of God's people to overcome death and evil.

The evil of injustice, of hate, of discrimination, of oppression is not only on Halloween, but each and every day of our lives. The end of injustice, of hate, of discrimination, of oppression is only on Halloween, but each and every day of our lives.

Larry Shaie's "The Nerd" is reminiscent of an "Ice Cold Night Line" sort called "The Thing That Isn't." The late John Belushi played the title role in that one. He, and so many others in the cast, made light of the pestilential public and making light of wafer-thin lines, as the script was toned down for television.

Shaie's play isn't quite a one-joke, with the joke being "a bad idea. A hideous creature comes out, terrorizes, and dies." Sharp.

The ILLAHEE cheer squad recently took first place in the Washington State Power Cheerleading competition held at壶口大学 in SEPTEMBER. This is the first competition of its kind in Washington and although Power Cheerleading has previously been practiced in Europe, it is new on this continent.

WASHINGTON has been included in the National Championship Series, an event where they will represent Washington State in their first competition.

Several members have been invited to compete in the National Championship Series. The squad from Stallion female, male, and mixed groups will be representing Washington State at the National Championship Series. A lot of girls still think of cheerleading as a frivolous activity, something they would never consider as a career. But this new form would make it possible for those girls who might not be interested in more traditional sports.

Raiders eye post-season berth

Although Jefferson seemed to have the better scoring chances, the Raiders had five starters who had to leave the game at one time or another due to injuries, including two who had to leave the game in the first half. Decatur remains tied for first

The Decatur girls' soccer team remained in a tie for first place in the Puget Sound League South Division standings with a 5-0 win at Clover Park Thursday. But Decatur had scored the game winner of 4-10. I've got a young squad, and probably two others that we could coach Brian Maxfield of his team. The defeat...
Report's prop nets explosive response

Inoceram study still could derail

A Federal Way High School student discovered Monday that police took his show-and-tell prop nets seriously when they seized a bag with white powdery contents.

Police reported the 18-year-old was giving a report on terrorism in a speech class.

"He brought in a bag with a prop net and a bag with white powdery substance," the officer told the student.

He said it was a surplus of plant diagnostics.

The student reported to police that a net, called a prop net, was seized from his bedroom.

"Police tested it and determined it inorganic," the officer said.

The officer, who was sent to the student's residence, added that the prop net was seized because it was brought into the classroom and potentially could be used as a terrorism-related weapon.

The student was taken to the police station, where he was questioned about the prop net and its contents.

"The student was cooperative with the police," the officer said.

During the investigation, the officer said that the student had a similar prop net at home.

"The student claimed he had bought the prop net for a science project," the officer said.

At the time of the incident, the student was a junior at Federal Way High School.

In a statement, the Federal Way High School district said it is investigating the incident and has contacted the police department for assistance.

The district added that the school has protocols in place to address such situations and that it is working with the police to ensure the safety of all students.

The police officer said the student was released from custody and given a date to return for a court appearance.

The incident is under investigation, and the school district is working with the police department to determine the extent of the investigation.

The police officer emphasized that the focus of the investigation is on ensuring the safety of all students and employees.

The incident is ongoing, and the school district will provide updates as more information becomes available.

"The school district is committed to ensuring the safety and well-being of all students and employees," the district said.
