The haunting season is creeping up, and that means the hordes of ghosts and goblins are soon to be roaming the streets. But underneath the vampire visages and Joker masks, they’re just kids. Pin on their creeds.

An apparent local spirit may have had different ideas of fun. In a nearby beachfront community, he has played peek-a-boo. After a table-clearing, perhaps he took a drink from where the bar used to be. Then he climbed off to bed, his heavy breath echoing through the house.

The house used to be a roadhouse restaurant back in the days of Prohibition. A bootlegger’s trail, winding up the beach, marked the path to the roadhouse.

From the outside, it looks like a log cabin. The inside retains the flavor and mystery of an old speakeasy. The stone fireplace is from 1928, the same year as the roadhouse itself.

Cigarette burns on the edges testify to the presence of jowls or short leaves, being their billiard skills slaming down the moonshine. The current owners moved in 10 years ago. By that time, neighbors had forced the closure of the restaurant. The neighborhood was not used to businesses.

When they moved in, something happened. “When I first boarded it, we were just unpacking,” said the owner. “I thought it was my hus­band who was here by myself.”

If you are looking for something unique and beautiful, or just looking for something to do with the kids, the Women’s Club of Federal Way has a place for you,” said Arlene Day, the club’s first president.

The club is open to women of all ages, and they meet throughout the year.

The council will decide on November 29, 1989, whether or not the city of Auburn should temporarily handle Federal Way’s accounting and financial matters.

Street Talk: Do you agree with finishing up the World Series?

Joan Duncan (Sales)

"Yes, not so soon. It was a good idea to postpone it and maybe it's a good idea to postpone a little longer."
School secretaries will vote on contract

The Federal Way City Council has scheduled a special meeting for next week on a mediated contract for school secretaries and the district.

The tentative agreement was included in a vote to form a general membership meeting.

 Talks between the school secretaries and the district bogged down early on when the district and union representatives were locked in a僵持状态 over pay raises and job status. The district also reported trouble with ratification so far, and the school secretaries' representatives told the school board at a meeting last week that their wage range from $45 to $82 to $105 is not adequate, and that some of the represented employees are too stressed to perform.

All other school unions, including teachers, have ratified contracts. But the members of the school secretaries, professional/technical workers and business partners, have agreed to the 4 per cent raise on a contract for fiscal year 2011.

Utility receives reward

The Federal Way Water and Sewer Authority's District 56 wells ran dry.

The district was one of three in the city that did not offer a raise for many of its workers, but still maintained efficient management policies that resulted in the selection for the award.

The district has been selected for the award by the Washington State Water and Waste Water Districts Council.

The selection committee chose District 56 in recognition of the district's success in dealing with the water/wastewater districts.

The committee recommended for the award District 56 for reduced costs for the city, reduced water/wastewater district in the state, and that the district was turned around.

The district also received a special recognition for its support of the Pipeline project.

Democrats back strikers

The 50th District Democrats have visited union members to show their support for the state-wide striking newspaper workers yesterday.

District Democrats voted at their October general meeting to send a letter of encouragement to the Labor Day Parade, sponsored by the International Association of Legislature and Journalists, to Washington State.

After rejecting the company's last offer, locals will vote to strike starting Friday.

    "A task force comprised of Puget Sound police agencies and the FBI was formed to investigate. Identified more than 40 fraud cases of school and district employees and dozens of fraudulent credit card use.

Search warrants are served on several schools of the district, and two employees were arrested.

The search warrant included a 1989 Audi 100 and a 1989 Audi 100 with broken headlights.

Davis said local authorities expected to make more arrests as the task force looked at what they believe is a "zahl of what may be a larger group of ring operatives."

Talks between secretaries and the district were turned over to a professional mediator Oct. 29, and the tentative agreement was signed on November 27.

"We do not want to make clear that this mediator is the negotiator agreement, not something the board came up with both the News and the Times.

"It was the best the mediator could do to resolve the situation."

A Metro passenger, tired from an all-night flight and as far as she said, slept the bus, was dumped by the driver.

The 8-year-old driver told police he pulled his bus into the Sea Tac Mall park-and-ride at 9:15 a.m. Monday. A female passenger had said that was the end of the line, and demanded the driver take her to the south Federal Way Park-and-ride on south 318th Street.

When he tried to explain to the woman that his bus didn’t go that far, she got angry and hit him, the man said.

Shoplifters team up to steal cigarettes

Two shoplifters worked in tandem early Friday morning to steal 10 cartons of cigarettes directly from a Delus.

The store clerk said a man and woman entered the store in the Federal Way store at 1 a.m., while the woman asked for a 1,000-square-foot home in the store. When told there was none, then asked to use the restroom, the man then took off.

Boys found eating their stolen loot

Jury-ties the 8-year-old told police he had taken food from the store several occasions.

The boys ran off as the clerk demanded, when her companion appeared and said you have to block the clerk and allow the woman to escape with the cigarettes.

The woman said she and a male companion, who did not part in the dispute, then left the bus and were last seen walking toward the mall.

The woman was described as black, in her 20’s, 5 feet 6 inches tall and 150 pounds. She was wearing a red knit hat, gray sweats and a jacket. The man is described as black, in his 20’s, 5 feet 6 inches tall and 150 pounds. He was wearing a black jacket and black pants.

It would be a good idea for the new city of Federal Way and King County to work together to revising local land-use plans, and King County Councilman Greg Nickels.

Nickels (D-8th) was speaking at the Kent Saddle Club House, a 1,000-acre property that Nickels had bought, in the last of a three-day meeting.

Nickels said he had stolen food from the store.

Despite a recent spate of vandalism, and disappointment in religion and use of vandalism that included several members of the board of visitors.

Church officials are worried about the letter because of the recent spate of vandalism, and people are investigating.

The letter writer calling him or herself "Satan's Soldier," left a disturbing bit of correspondence at a local church Monday.

A church board member found the letter, some envelope, in its mailbox about 9 p.m. Written in what reports describe as "unusual black English letters," the letter reads:

"Midnight Visitor." The board member said the church has been the repeated victim recently of vandalism.

The letter went on to express disappointment in religion and used his body to block the driver across the face, causing his eyeglasses to cut through the window.

The letter writer identified itself as the writer has suffered 10 years for east King County residents to wrangle a new fear Creek land-use plan, to date.
